Foreword

Eight bells are sounding. The watch is changing. New officers are in command. Fresh men are at the helm. Bearings are taken. Navigation proceeds. The log is written. The relieved seamen go below—some to work, some to sleep.

So, the watch is changing at this University. She has been navigated with great care and skill, and her Master is to remain aboard for another voyage. We are glad. As the men go below decks to work or sleep, we remind them that there is always a berth awaiting a good seaman, and we wish them the best of luck. Our log is written; winds and currents, speeds and courses are recorded. We hope our records are shipshape.

In the presence of the Honorable
 Trustees of this Academy and the Masonic Brethren of Hillsboro and elsewhere, William R. Davie, Cavalry
 Commander, Grand Master of North Carolina, laid this stone with full rites on the 12th day of October in the year of Light the 5793rd, of Salvation the 1793rd, and of American Independence the 18th. May it be more lasting than bronze.

Face and reverse of the plate from the corner stone of the Old East Building, restored to the University on October 12, 1916, through the thoughtful loyalty of T. B. Foust, '03; A. R. Shaw, '84, and A. B. Andrews, Jr., '93.

In Explanation

THE Editors would like to call attention to the fact that the Art work in this book has some connection with the history of this Institution.

Book I, "Our University," shows the artist's idea of the laying of the corner stone of Old East Building on October 12, 1793, in which William R. Davie officiated.

Book II, "Classes," represents the first commencement on July 4, 1798. Seven young men were granted diplomas.

Book III, "Organizations," represents the first organization at the University. It was called "The Debating Society," and was organized June 3, 1795.

Book IV, "Athletics," shows two students fencing, which was a popular sport in the old days when long walks and buggy rides were in fashion.

"The Dance" shows how the lawn party of the commencement of 1879 was broken up, the people going inside to dance.

"Vanity Fair" shows the delightful costumes which the fair ones favored when our University was young.

Due to the increasing size of this book, mistakes in the Classes section are practically unavoidable. So, to eliminate as many mistakes as possible, we have not arranged members of the classes alphabetically, but have inserted an index in the back of the book.

Dedication

LESLIE WEIL: born in Goldsboro June 29, 1876, son of a mother whose home was a school for citizenship and whose life is quiet, unceasing service, and of a father whose individual ability helped to build a business and whose public spirit helped to build a city, he has grown into the life of his commercial, religious and civic community.

As a member of the firm of H. Weil & Brother he has helped to build a business which is both a commercial asset and a civic agency. As a member and president of the Hebrew Congregation he has helped to make a live synagogue a social institution. As a citizen of Goldsboro he has been a part of every movement for the public good. In business, religious and civic citizenship he exemplifies in his fine, self-effacing way the University man in the community.

Just as his University spirit carries him into the whole life of his community, so the momentum of his community life carries him into the life of the University as an agency of the Commonwealth. As Trustee since 1915, member of the Finance Committee of the Trustees since 1920 and of the Executive Committee since 1923, he has given himself without reserve to the University—in small details and in large policies, in the routine of her every day and in the crises of her history. As Alumnus, in the capacity of member of the Graham Memorial Committee, director of the Alumni Association, incorporator of the University Press, Chairman of the Alumni Loyalty Fund Council, and participant in the Weil Lecture Foundation in American Citizenship, his love of Alma Mater has been not so much a phrase on his lips as a fact in his life.

It is not merely his contacts and achievements as merchant and citizen, alumnus and trustee, but the qualities of the man shining through them all which moves this dedication from Alma Mater to Leslie Weil.

She never called him that he did not come.

Φ B K, T K A.

There are people whom we love to have "come around"; there are those to whom we love to go for advice; there are those who are real friends, those who take their work seriously and give play its proper place. "J. F." may truthfully be said to possess all these characteristics.

When we see his P. B. K. key, we know he is a student; when we meet him, we know he has a striking personality; and when we work with him, we are sure of his "stickability."

We feel justified to the Nth degree in predicting success for "J. F." in his chosen profession, the law.

ERNEST SCOTT BARR

Greensboro, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 20

E T E, Σ Δ, Σ Τ.

"Scotch," the nickname of this young gentleman, explains much and little. It does not explain the cherubic smile which usually illumines his countenance, nor his apostolic manner of folding his hands when pleased. He has dabbled in a bit of this and that—from intramural tennis to marathon bill sessions, and we might add that he wields a mean racquet at either. He has been a member of the Dean's List since its founding. He flatly refuses to fall in love, but otherwise he has the earmarks of being one of the most permanent friends it has been our good fortune to acquire.

KERMIT GLENN PHILLIPS

Siler City, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 20

German Club; Chatham County Club, Vice President; Committee of "100"; N. C. Club; Dormitory Baseball; Horseshoes; Boxing.

There is an art in combining college studies with college activities to the point of achieving success and prominence in both. "Phil" has mastered this art. When he entered the University in the fall of 1923, he could not see the necessity of consuming four years in getting an A.B. Degree; so he did it in three years, with a summer school thrown in for good measure.

But it is not to be inferred from the above that he is all work and no play, for he has entered heartily into the social side of education. Although shy at first, one term of summer school broke him, and since then his presence has been felt at every social event.

At the end of his college career, he should consider himself fortunate. Phil is leaving Carolina with the satisfaction of knowing that he is taking with him everything that college can give to a man and is leaving behind him a record of which he should justly be proud.

GUY WENDELL HARRISON

Chapel Hill, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Chemistry

Age: 21

A X Σ.

Only a few of us are willing to spend five years at Carolina to acquire a degree —Ginny is one of these. Starting in Electrical Engineering, he soon perceived the error of his ways and changed to Chemistry. Only when struggling with Physical Chemistry does he admit that this was a false move.

Those who have braved the dangers of Chemistry and known him in his own environment are fortunate in having a true friend. We wish him the greatest success in his profession—and may his two hundred pounds never grow less!

Almost forgot to mention one thing—Guy is very good natured, but don't ask him anything about King Arthur; it is apt to prove dangerous.

FRED WEYMOUTH DAVIS

Elizabeth City, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Chemistry

Age: 21

A X Σ.

Anybody who has been inside the Chemistry Building within the last four years knows Fred, by reputation if not by name. He is one of those who believe that actions speak louder than words, and is continually illustrating his point by numerous explosions and conflagrations. In fact, he even went so far once this year as to pour burning methanol over himself. He has since recovered sufficiently to regret the fullness of the bottle.

Fred's academic record is just what it should be. And in the social world Fred has been as successful. All of us who knew him here feel sure he will meet life's problems as he met those in Physical Chemistry and emerge the victor.

GEORGE WILLIAM OWEN

Baltimore, Md.

Degree: B.S., Chemistry

Age: 21

Alembic Club.

Φ B K, A X Σ.

George decided four years ago that a successful career as a poet was highly problematical; abandoning this, he took Chemistry as his profession. At times, however, he is unable to restrain himself—the results appearing in the Carolina Magazine.

Aside from his poetry and his important research in Physical Chemistry, George's trip to Europe on a cattle boat made him a globe-trotter at heart.

George has been disgustingly proficient in the small matter of passing courses—witness his Phi Beta key. His scholastic record may be equaled or even surpassed, but his personality can never be replaced. He deserves every success, and we wish him just that.

WILLIAM HENRY CLARK

Charlotte, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

Mecklenburg County Club.

Full of pep, fond of dancing, and a ladies' man from the start—that's "Bill." He can laugh at less, laugh longer, and laugh louder, than any other man in college; even laughs at his own jokes. No one likes a good time better, nor has a better one.

"Bill" possesses a strong desire to argue, and will engage any one, any time, upon any subject. The fact that he always has his work prepared accounts for his getting along so well with his professors, especially with Dr. Hamilton. His hobby is salesmanship. He has "push," and with experience, will probably acquire the necessary "brass" to become a master salesman.

JOHN VANSTORY FARRINGTON

Winston-Salem, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 23

$\Phi\Delta X.$

You will go a long way before you find a better man than John Farrington, more familiarly known to his classmates as "Dean." He has an air of business-like decisiveness and is gifted with the power of expressing his knowledge. He possesses a masterly understanding of Pharmacy and deserves great praise for the commendable manner in which he pursued his course. We wish him the greatest success, and know that he will succeed because he is a high-class man and one with whom it is a delight to do business.

GUY ADAMS CARDWELL, JR.

Wilmington, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 20

Tar Heel Board; Philanthropic Assembly; Student Activities Group; German Club; Freshman Friendship Council; Manager, Freshman Tennis; "Ya Godz" Musical Comedy; Carolina Magazine Board (3, 4); Journalism Club; Epsilon Upsilon; Carolina Buccaneer (2); Managing Editor (3); Editor-in-Chief (4).

$\Sigma \Delta$ ,  $\Phi B K$ ,  $\Sigma T$ .

Guy, or as his best friends familiarly call him, "Guy," is a most astounding study in warped individuality. Having within him a deep capacity for romance and high seriousness, he was forced by the relentless hand of collegiate circumstance into the official chair of blah, locally known as the Carolina Buccaneer. A master of hypocrisy, he affects at all times an air of negative good will toward the many non-essential oafs and men-about-the-campus. Personally, we think he made Phi Beta Kappa because the professors were afraid of him, but no one would ever suspect it to see his unassuming mien. But they could not doubt it knowing the number of nine-thirties that he has slept through.

Although he is a rabid prohibitionist (if you must know the lurid details) he is a darn good fellow, and has a most engaging sneer when he doesn't bother to conceal it. In fact, he is a darn good fellow; several people have called him that and gotten away with it.

WILLIAM RUSSELL GRIFFIN

Macclesfield, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 21

Russell once thought that he would tie up and settle down on the old homestead and continue to reap profits on the "Virginia Bright Leaf" and "Cook's Improved," but on reconsideration he decided that rolling pills was not quite as strenuous an occupation. This resulted in his joining us in the fall of 1924.

While here Russell has made quite an enviable record, always ranking near the top of his class in scholastic work. In making such a record he has not been a bookworm. The "Pick" has always welcomed him on an average of five nights a week. He has also had plenty of time for bull sessions, a fact which has won for him innumerable friends.

JAMES HAL KEMP

Charlotte, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 22

U. N. C. Musical Club (1, 2, 3, 4); Wigee and Masque (2, 3, 4); President (3); U. N. C. Band (1, 2); Librarian (1); U. N. C. Orchestra (1, 2, 3, 4); Organizer and Director Original Carolina Club Orchestra; Mecklenburg County Club; Athletic Association (1, 2, 3, 4); German Club (2, 3, 4); Freshman Friendship Council; Glee Club (1, 2, 3, 4).

$\Delta \Sigma \Phi$ ,  $\Lambda \Phi E$ .

Possessing a fine personality that has won for him a large host of friends, combined with a musical talent that marks him as a genius, together with a good ability as a student, has made Hal one of the leaders of the campus.

He has rendered great service to the University through his excellent aid in fostering the musical life of the student body.

He was the leader of the famous Carolina Club Orchestra which toured Europe and the States, getting a great ovation wherever they were heard. So great was their popularity that the Prince of Wales requested them to play for him on the Berengaria on his way to the States in the summer of '24.

With his marked ability, seriousness of purpose, fine spirit of fellowship, Hal will go on, achieving the fine things of life and meeting with the success that he deserves.

OSCAR ELI TURLINGTON

Freemont, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 22

"Ole Eli," another one of those Turlingtons that can always be recognized by their Fremont brogue. A staunch supporter of Carolina and a great believer in the Tar Heels' supremacy as athletes, Eli can always be seen at every athletic contest in which Carolina participates whether at home or abroad.

He is also a star player on all the New Dorm's Intramural athletic teams and is a New Dorms man through and through. Oscar, as he is known by the summer school girls, is quite a ladies' man, but this is not his only fault—the other is Monsieur Van Landingham's French 5.

What he will enter after graduation is a mystery, but we know that he will cause Wayne County to be proud of him.

JOHN O'NEILL RAGSDALE

Madison, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

S A E.

Jack looked like a freshman; he was long and gangly and wore a big red "G" on his sweater. He explained that he had just come from Guilford College and was a Sophomore. Three years have passed, and now he is a senior. He still wears the "G," but he turns it under. He has become a polished society man, popular with the ladies, witty and entertaining, and with more friends than are good for him. He's the sort of fellow who has lots of nicknames—"Rags" and "Oscar" are the latest—and who is always ready for any adventure. In "Bull sessions" his best tales concern the fraternity houseparties at which he slept all night on a pile of cushions behind the piano to avoid disturbing the sleeping young ladies, and stood all morning on his head in a puddle of water to keep his feet dry. He is head of a harem—with a signed photograph of each girl to remember who is who. He is not an artist, but he can draw mighty well.

Jack's senior dignity is seldom abused (he does, however, occasionally practice the "Charleston"). He is going to be a banker, and everybody knows that his success is assured, for he certainly can make and keep friends. We hope he will be able to keep their money as well.

WILLIAM EDWARD HARDEE

Stem, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 20

American Pharmaceutical Association; Intramural Athletics; Glee Club.

K Ψ.

Good looking, good natured, and above all a good fellow. Always ready for a letter and an Eskimo pie, that's Bill.

Bill returned to us in '25. Throughout his stay here he has worked for two things—"Dean's Pharmacy" and "The One Girl." Pharmacy is all right, and for the rest, we must say, "She is a lucky girl."

Bill plans to locate in Durham, but we feel sure that within a few years he will be operating a chain of drug stores.

Although he is in love, and what is more, is going to locate in Durham, we cannot hold these against him, and as one of our best friends we wish him health, wealth, and happiness.

THOMAS JOHN MOORE

Wilson, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 22

Φ Δ X.

"Tom," as he is known to his friends, is a very quiet sort of a character. He is most generally seen during his "off hours" parked in an arm chair with a book in his lap, never wasting time at all when another fellow would. His only sport is an indoor one, catching the first "Pick" every night.

He is one of those fellows who has only one girl, and all the rest never cross his mind.

Tom is a serious and studious boy, taking things as they come. Because of this we know he will be a great asset to his profession, and one of the most successful druggists for all days to come.

WILLIAM McDOWELL MATTHEWS

Wilson, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 21

William P., as he is so often called by his classmates, after spending one year in academic at A. C. C., his home town college, entered U. N. C. Bill has one great weakness "women." To him they are all one. His fickleness in this respect will no doubt vanish as he ascends the road to maturity, for he is possessed with a tactful mind. He never lets his work interfere with his love for sports, and spends his time for recreation in attending socials and dancing.

We wish for him a most successful career and that his worries never exceed his happiness in the future as they have failed to do in the past.

VERGIL REX SINK

Winston-Salem, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Medicine

Age: 26

Forsyth County Club; Secretary-Treasurer First Year Medical Class '25; Medical Society; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

A K K. Φ B K.

There are certain valuable characteristics which an altruistic medical man must possess, but seldom do we find them all embodied in one personality. Here, however, we have an exception to the rule.

Rex, as he is familiarly known, possesses a pleasing personality, a remarkable understanding and consideration of the other fellow, a saving sense of humor and an inexhaustible supply of ready wit. Wherever you find him, he is always the same. In dealing with his associates he is straightforward, honest and sincere; as a friend he is true and loyal; in his work he is thorough and exact; and above all a man through and through.

Carolina loses a valuable man. The medical profession is the winner.

WALKER M. K. BENDER

Pollocksville, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 20

Glee Club; Assistant In Pharmacy; American Pharmaceutical Association.

Φ Δ X.

Walter came to Carolina with two main objects in view. The first was to uphold the reputation of the Benders set by three brothers here before him. The second ambition was to become an expert Pharmacist. As he leaves, his two big jobs have been done.

In saying "good-bye" to Walker, the large host of friends that he has acquired feel a deep regret in having to be deprived of the cheery contact of that we have become accustomed to, and hope in the future we shall have the good fortune of frequently seeing him. We all wish him the best of luck and hope "Bender's Pharmacy" will soon be known throughout the State.

JOSEPH NICHOLSON ASBILL

Ridge Springs, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Joseph joined us in the fall of 1924 after finishing his sophomore year at the College of the City of Charleston, S. C. During his sojourn with us on the campus he has made many friends, and all who know him like him. Courteous manners, strong character, efficiency in work—these are some of the fine qualities he possesses.

Joseph in unquestionably a good student, for he passes his work in a very creditable manner. Yes, it is true that he has been on the Dean's List more than one time. Much of his time is spent with his books, but he finds time to take in the "Pick" once in a while.

Although Joseph has not yet decided what his life work is to be, we are sure that whatever he undertakes will be a great success. In saying good-bye, we wish him the best of luck, and we see no reason why he should not be a credit to Carolina in the years to come.

WALTON PRENTISS O'NEAL

Belhaven, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 21

American Pharmaceutical Association,

Φ Δ X.

Here is the little live wire from the East who thinks of nothing but work and Irma. He can make more dopes and write more letters in one day than the ordinary man can in two. But we will have to watch him or we may lose him, because there are rumors about Thanksgiving. No matter what happens we expect to hear a few years hence of a druggist named O'Neal who has made his and gone on.

WILLIE BENJAMIN EVERETT

Robersonville, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

This handsome gentleman joined us in 1922. After wintering at Randolph-Macon Academy for three years he decided to try Carolina for a while. Willie B. has certainly enjoyed his stay (ask anybody), has won distinction for Robersonville by graduating, and has made a record that is hard to surpass.

One of Willie's chief faults is the ladies. He breaks their hearts and leaves them gasping for breath. Willie's ambition is to be a business man with a New York office as his headquarters where he can attend to business and go to Zeigfeld's Follies every day. Here's luck, Willie, may all your ambitions be realized, and we are sure they will be.

X. THEOPHILUS KEEL, JR.

Rocky Mount, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 22

Nash-Edgecombe County Club; Philanthropic Society; Rocky Mount Club; German Club; Dormitory Club; Freshman Track Squad ('23); Varsity Track Squad ('24, '25, '26); Cross Country Squad ('24, '25, '26); Assistant Manager Wrestling Team ('24, '25); Assistant Manager Track Team ('25).

A A T.

X, the unknown quantity, yet known by all, comes to us from the famous city, Rocky Mount. It is a town noted for its fast trains and pretty girls. His motto is: "Variety is the spice of life." Sports! Yes sir, he was a faithful scrub on the track team for three years. However, that was not the reason for his running up to Greensboro each week-end. He likes his wild parties and fun, but always gets serious on the home stretch.

Advertising and Salesmanship were X's hobby in the Commerce School. It may pay to advertise, but X's name and keen commercial ability assures him of success. Here's to you in the parade of life, X.

ABBE PAUL CARSWELL

Winston-Salem, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 22

Casting behind him the bright lights of the "Twin-City," Paul entered the University with the sole aim of obtaining a degree in Pharmacy. He sought also the right to practice that profession in order that he might return and take over an established business. In his aim he has in no manner fallen short, and has also set a high standard for followers in the School of Pharmacy.

His work here has by no means consumed all his time. He has had time to acquire friends in all branches of the University. When he leaves us and takes up the practice of his chosen profession, we are assured, judging from his past record, that success must crown his every effort.

FALTON OATS GARREN

Arden, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 19

K Ψ.

Garren is another one of those boys who elected to spend their time in Dean Howell's pharmacy laboratory, and, to hear him talk, he has spent a good bit of it over there. However, his time has not been wasted, for he is one of the Dean's star pupils. Witness his age; few men receive a degree so young.

"F. O." has not spent all his time in the lab though. He has found time to visit much over the campus and to make many friends. And besides there is that little lady friend to whom he must either write to or go to see so often. If his work here at the University is any criterion to judge by, we believe that the future years hold for this young man a large measure of success.

BASCOM ROMMIE PHIFER

Marshville, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 22

Phifer came to Carolina with the determination of making a great druggist. We know from his past marks in life that he will continue to do so and stay on the top, no matter where he may be. He is liked by every one; has the personality of making friends and keeping them.

We often times wondered why he went home so often, but now what was at one time a secret is known to the world, he has more than himself to care for.

We feel safe in our prophecy when we say that he will be a success in the business world. May success crown his efforts.

GEORGE CARL KELLY

Lillington, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 21

Although Kelly is one of the quietest and most unassuming boys on the campus, he is one of the most popular ones. His quiet demeanor and his cheerful smile have won him a place in the hearts of a great number of friends. Kelly is one of that group of boys who seem to have chosen the work which is in line with their talents. He is one of the best students in the Pharmacy school, and we hope some day to see him as one of the leading druggists of the State. Although he is a rather studious lad, he also finds time to devote to other campus activities; and one can very often find him at the "Pick" or on the athletic field.

Here's luck to you, Kelly, in everything that you undertake!

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 21

American Pharmaceutical Association; Freshman Football Squad.

Bidding "Good-bye" to the mountains and beautiful scenery of Western North Carolina, Dan came here in pursuit of a degree in Pharmacy and the right to practice his chosen profession. This aim he has achieved and also a name for himself in the school of Pharmacy. His career has not been one of a grind by any means. He found time to acquire many friends not only in the University, but in our sister institution in Greensboro as well.

When he goes back to the old stamping ground, a full-fledged Pharmacist, we hope that he does as well in the practice of his profession as he did in preparation for it.

This picture speaks for itself, but for those who have not had the pleasure of knowing "L. W." personally, we might say a few words. The record he leaves behind is one to be proud of as he has made a real success of his college career. He has taken an active interest in other activities as well as in his studies. In nature he is quiet and reserved, but he has won for himself a host of friends while at Carolina. In view of the ability that he has shown in the Commerce school we are sure that he will become a prominent leader in the business world.

During his four years at Carolina "Smutt" has achieved a success that is real and permanent. He is one of those unassuming men that would rather show you his virtues than tell you of them. He has not sought honors upon the campus, but has been content with being one of its good citizens; and these after all give stability and genuine character to our campus life.

We understand his aspirations lead him into the furniture line, but whether in Burlington or High Point, we can't say. At any rate, we believe the State is getting a real business man; and equipped with a strong character, a winning personality, and a liberal mind. "Smutt" just can't fail.

Who can listen to the celebrated line of this blonde gentlemen, who has been called "the Demosthenes of the Twentieth Century," and doubt that the land of the sky is the choicest spot on God's green earth?

Taylor has been a regular visitor at the co-ed dormitory. In fact that haven of beauty would seem dull without him.

As well as being a great ladies' man, Taylor is also a brilliant athlete. He batted .483 in the Epworth League four years in succession. His success in these lines is equaled in others. He has been prominent in politics, debating, oratory, and fraternity work. In him, Tammany Hall will find its most dangerous competitor.

Tom is one of those rare students who loves his work so well that he really takes his college education seriously. It takes more than a mere college instructor or a sensational magazine article to dominate his thinking. He might well be called a "liberal conservative" since he is always so composed and ready to listen; however, before he will subscribe to any view it must conform to certain definite standards which are admittedly very superior. In his eyes mediocrity is the greatest sin and excellence the true virtue, so we can be sure that whatever he does out in life will be done well.

"Doc" is our idea of the real student. Throughout his career at the Hill he has avoided the "crips" in preference to taking the exact sciences, which seem to cause him no undue trouble in being understood. In fact, this fellow from the sand hills has consistently maintained his Phi Beta Kappa average through more than the usual number of courses, among which have been Dr. Wilson's Zoölogy. His intimacy with the Profs has gone to such a degree that he can almost call some of them "Froggy," "Jim," and "Dr. Pat."

Daring to think for himself, Zealy has not allowed his individuality to be lost in the process of acquiring an education. He not only thinks for himself but also expresses his ideas whenever his opinion is asked, no matter how busy he may be. We are sure he will succeed.

Harold is famous, first of all, for his rather exceptional managerial ability. However, this does not tell the whole story, for he is equally as good when it comes to "les affaires de la coeur." If you ever want to see Harold call by the Tar Heel office, and if he isn't there, then you will know that he is at a famous and well-known institute in Raleigh. What puzzles us is how he ever managed to graduate in four years, dividing his time with other things as he does.

Perhaps his greatest attribute is his friendly personality. We have yet to meet the person, of either sex, who disliked Harold. A good sport and a true pal—a man we shall never forget when we are no longer "classmates."

"Hump" is of the sort that finds time to live while in school. Week-ends have seen him enjoying life in Greensboro, Raleigh, and in his home town, Fayetteville.

Some folks make friends involuntarily. Of such is Vann—always considerate and thoughtful; a happy and congenial companion. And, if energy and activity characterize successful business, he will be a credit to his chosen field of endeavor, advertising.

Billy is a man of parts—he takes more little mysterious trips in a month than the average college man takes in four years. He's the most active man in his class; a star on the cinder path, where he takes the hurdles like a rabbit jumps a ditch; a prize-winner on the ballroom floor; and a ladies' man without being a lizardly lounger. And yet, with all his various activities, Billy has never neglected his studies, as is shown by his taking and passing electrical engineering, one of the stiffest courses in the University. His college popularity assures his later success, and his numerous friends wish him a world of happiness.

Here is a man of most unique character. There are few who possess the diverse characteristics of brilliance, social ability, and companionship in well-rounded portions. Beverly has these attributes along with many others. His capacity for learning is nothing short of genius, graduating in three years, in the pre-medical school, and never making less than an A on any of his thirty-six courses —a record unparalleled in the annals of the University. How he could do it and still maintain a social schedule is beyond us. He never missed a dance, and few week-end trips were passed up. A more modest man than Bev cannot be found. He goes his way in a determined and conscientious fashion, being diligent and constant at all times.

Beverly intends to study medicine, and we are sure none possess greater potential abilities. He has the makings of a doctor whose reliability will receive the confidence of all, and we feel sure that some day he will be a leader in his profession.

George came to drink at the pharmaceutical fountains of Carolina in the fall of 1924. His two years of practical experience had taught the lesson of business before pleasure. The concrete example and proof of this fact is to be seen when one holds the splendid scholarship grades that have filled, for the past two years, the little white card of fear which is a source of much anxiety until the inevitable has been learned. But all work and no play ruins the enthusiasm of the most vigorous man. George has sensed this, and, consequently, the movie queens, and otherwise, have been honored by quite a little of this young man's time. But, to business—for this is a George word—we wish for you the most successful of careers which you will undoubtedly strive for; and may the citizens of our wonderful State, with whom you come in contact, imbibe at another fountain which will be filled with the fruits of your learning at old N. "What importance attaches to a cognomen?" once inquired a certain English scenario writer. In our present case, little—for in spite of his name Paul does not leave a dark green taste in your mouth and you don't have to learn to like him. As a matter of fact, he possesses that peculiarly intangible personal quality which begins with a capital P (not Pelmanism) and he early insinuates himself into one's hearty approval. A good student, fluent writer, and widely read master of the art of Taurus, he is one of the campus's worth-while night hawks, and we recall pleasantly numerous diminutive morning hours spent with him in discussing and settling campus and world problems. Henry Fuller is like a deep river. He moves quietly about the campus and over all of us he exerts an influence which we can compare only to that of the E. K. G. of tradition. A bewitching smile has he, that captivates and works its way into your heart, and remains there always.

When there is an election in any organization to which he belongs there is never a question as to who shall be president—Henry is always elected.

Just what his philosophy or creed of life may be nobody knows, not even his closest friends. But that matters little—for Henry fits into no dogma; no dogma fits Henry. For three and a half years Bob went calmly about his work and studies, and his diligence was rewarded by his being one of those lucky mortals who graduate six months ahead of their class. That does not mean that he was a grind, for Bob rolled through on a gentleman's average of "C."

And, too, he has taken his fun where he's found it all the way through, catching the "Pick" when the desire struck him and punctuating his time on the "Hill" with regular pilgrimages to Greensboro. Some say that a student is judged by the record he makes in college. Accepting this as truth, "Bill" has busied himself with keeping a minute and even pictorial record of his whole college career. About six memory books comprise this record, and every page is proof that "Billy" was always in the thick of the game. He left us in the spring of his Junior year, and did Europe in five months of extensive and expensive travel.

"Bill" may not have been a great success with his studies, but he has certainly succeeded in making a host of friends. He has the real knack of making those friendships that count, and probably one of the secrets of it is his delightful Charleston brogue, and his South Carolina smile.

"Bill" says the University is dear to his heart, and that he hates to leave it; but nevertheless, he can hardly wait until Commencement—to be more accurate, commencement dances—for "Bill" is a ball manager, and his best girl is going to be here. What could be greater?

"Jim's" activities are not confined to the classroom, however. He is a musician of real ability, and the University band suffered a loss when he allowed Mr. Daggett's problems to lure him away from the flute and piccolo.

His natural abilities, inexhaustible energy, kindness, and pleasant personality should enable him to mount the top rung in the ladder of success; and his service to humankind gain him admission through the Pearly Gates and permit his tired soul to rest peacefully on the downy couch of eternal bliss, so well merited.

Carolina has ruined another good man! Willis Benton Pipkin came to us the ideal youth of our Southland, and the "Pride of Reidsville." He was known for his integrity, seriousness of purpose, and unblemished character — now he has changed. O Zeus, must it ever be thus?

This modest and unassuming young man has gone steadily from bad to worse. A financier, economist, scholar, philosopher, and friend, he has been shamed with the title of President Phi Beta Kappa, spanked by the Golden Fleece, and barely escaped exile to England for three years by the Rhodes Scholarship Committee.

He doesn't realize what a failure he has been, nor is he sufficiently alarmed over the fact that there are 2249 boys in the University who love and strive to imitate him.

When good fellows get together, "Bob," alias "William Jennings," can always be counted on to be present. The longer you know him, the better you like him. His sterling qualities ring true at every flip and you know you have found a man, a real man, whom you will be proud to claim for a friend.

We predict for Bob a brilliant future in the financial world. When he is seated in his Wall Street office behind a ground glass door marked "Private," we wonder if he will ever think of "Carolina in the morning," say about 8:30. "William Jennings," Here's luck! May it all come your way.

The ideal woman is gentle and soft-spoken; she is lovely and pleasant. The beauties of her person are surpassed only by the perfections of her mind and soul. This is considered by the simple epitome of womanhood. Such phrases alone are fit for tombstone and poetry. But when you add to them a hot temper and the stubbornness of a mule they become living. Take all this along with a love of pretty clothes and fun and you have Annie Mary. This interesting girl rides horseback down the middle of Main Street. That cannot fluster her. Her poise is remarkable. If she were dropped in the sea, she would swim to the nearest island and in five minutes look as if she had just stepped out of a bandbox. She takes music and philosophy and four other academic courses. Still life is not complex enough, so she takes a campus course, and in spite of it all, comes up dignified and smiling.

Rarely indeed does a man so distinguish himself for ability and versatility with so little apparent effort as Stacy has done in his college career. Equally active in fields scholastic, athletic, and social, he has ever confronted obstacles with that cheerful perseverance which eliminated the possibility of failure, and achieved success with that rare modesty which seems oblivious of its own merit. As a result, Stacy has surrounded himself with admiring friends who, though they are sorry at seeing him leave, are certain that his future will bring repetition, on a greater scale, of the successes which he has won at Carolina. Having witnessed his reliability in carrying out duties, we are assured that he will be a credit to any profession he enters.

Stolid, steadfast, and capable is "T-Tom." When he is in the right and knows it, there is no power which can alter his mental set or determination. Managerial ability is an inherent attribute of his nature. Moreover, we would make a bet that Tom's financial statement for the YACKETY YACK will show the just reward of a manager to be quite satisfactory. Far be it from us to say that he is so expert with figures that he can juggle them; yet he does have great business ability.

At present it seems that he is vacillating between going into the foreign sales field and forming a partnership down in Anderson, S. C. We predict that a certain trade union will make its mark abroad.

Because of her ability gained in domestic science courses and in classrooms of psychology to please the inner man, her friends do not understand her reluctance to match-make for herself, and they think that her dignity and coldness are only outer garments, and that her warm heart and hot rolls have already won a "not impossible" him, whom she will soon domesticate, and so show those whom she has been assisting on the paths of affection that "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

"Marriage is a great thing," the philosophers tell us. If so, Kapp has lapped the field in emotional experiences. How he ever persuaded such an exquisite package of beauty to say "Yes" is still a mystery to us, but it seems that his phenomenal luck, originally demonstrated across the baize-covered table, is still with him. And, to cap the climax, he has completed a standard course in less than four years. We can wish a man of such perfect sobriety and unceasing economy no better future than domestic felicity and a profitable part in the coming real estate boom.

It falls to the lot of each of us during our college life to number only one or two of our acquaintances as friends. And these are, perhaps not the most scintillating, nor the most constant on our calling list, but those who have that happy combination of qualities which gives us, in their company, a pleasant sense, as Jurgens would have it, of being understood. Hal, of whom we were speaking, came from Louisiana in 1922 with an antipathy for the Pope and the Ku Klux Klan. To this seeming paradox of dislikes he soon added fundamentalism and everything else which attempts to hinder freedom of thought. Once here, he has very successfully managed everything from an Editor's portfolio to the track team. "Doc," as he is best known to his numerous friends, came to Carolina three years ago with the intention of taking Medicine; but now he says he is going to take Chemistry instead. Whether this is because he made mostly A's in his Chemistry courses, or because, as rumor has it, a blonde in last summer school told him that it would take him too long to take medicine, we don't know, but we won't be surprised if "Doc" ends up in getting a marriage license soon after getting his diploma.

Many are "Doc's" virtues, not the least among which is his Phi Beta Kappa scholarship, but we don't have space to enumerate all. However, we can say this much, that in whatever life work "Doc" chooses—Medicine, Chemistry, or matrimony—his superior ability to learn, his earnestness for his work, his willingness to help his friends in every way possible, and his sincere and friendly manners will gain him the friendship and loyalty of all who come into contact with him, and will make him happy and prosperous.

He entered the University foreordained to be a doctor, and has worked with this in view these four years. As a freshman, he had athletic aspirations, but knowing that medicine and athletics do not blend so well, he gave up the latter, and concentrated his energies in the pursuit of his profession. His brother left a reputation in the chemistry building for him to live up to, and he has done this well. We recommend very highly this type of man to the medical profession.

Age: 21

Instructor in Pharmacy; American Pharmaceutical Association; Pharmacy Librarian.

If you are looking for a good-natured chap here he is. His ambition to know and make good in his profession is well on the way to realization.

Truly we can say that he is immune to the common evils found on the hill, except the "Pick." We might also add that Sundays find him an interested listener to what the parson has to say. His hobby is waiting for the evening mail to bring the "glad tidings."

Due to his interest and excellent work, he was appointed instructor in Pharmacy during his senior year.

For such a character, no one would dare predict other than success and happiness.

FLEETWOOD HALL SCROGGS

Canton, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 23

North Carolina Branch of American Pharmaceutical Association, President (1925-26); Secretary-Treasurer Senior Pharmacy Class; Assistant in Pharmacy (1925-26); Macon-Jackson County Club; Contributor to the State Journal of Pharmacy; voted "Most Popular" boy in Pharmacy School; Mason; Acacia Fraternity; Historian (1925-26).

K Ψ:

No, girls, don't get excited, 'cause he's perfectly harmless, since a fair little lady in Franklin, the Key City of the Mountains, has already spoken for him.

You always see Fleet with a big cigar, and you would judge from the size of the cigar that he was running a chain of drug stores; but he claims that it is all for practice, because some day he hopes to smoke larger cigars and to even govern the price of Pills.

Fleet is Dr. Beard's right-hand man. He came to the "Hill" with the determination of learning Pharmacy and has succeeded. This year he has been an Assistant in Pharmacy, and for this reason has had a number of "freshmen" hanging around his room at night.

Whether it be work or play Fleet is there whole-heartedly and, therefore, we expect to hear of great things from him.

SAMUEL BRUCE FEWELL

Rock Hill, S. C.

Degree: A.B. in Education

Age: 21

South Carolina Club.

A A T.

Bruce matriculated at Davidson as a freshman in the autumn of 1922. It was his ultimate desire to attend his denominational college in the early period of his intellectual training. After spending two very profitable years at this institution, and a tour of Europe, he migrated to Carolina. The atmosphere was too suppressing and he came here to study where freedom of thought and truth are inculcated. Bruce has pursued physics into its intricate spheres. As a pedagogue, he intends to teach the puzzling formulae and almost unintelligible facts of physics.

His friendliness of personality has made him most beloved by the many students who have been so fortunate as to penetrate the gulf of introduction.

Fuzzy, as he is known to that fortunate circle of his friends, has decided to grace the campus for two more years with his headquarters at Caldwell Hall. We are glad that he does not leave us too soon, for he has won ever increasing popularity and the addition of two years, though chiefly occupied in the delectable pursuit of carving stiffs, done to a rich brown in Dean Andy's preservative vats, will, we are sure, win him even a more permanent place in the hearts of his associates.

Fuzzy has stood well in his studies and has participated in many of the so-called "campus activities." He will lead in anything he undertakes, and we wish him all success in his chosen profession.

GUION LINWOOD SEWELL

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 21

American Pharmaceutical Association; Band;
Onslow County Club.

Guion is one of those who is fully appreciated and esteemed by all those who know him. He came here in the fall of '23 from Onslow County, and since he has been here he has shown to every one the ability and capability which heretofore Onslow has kept concealed. He has fully proven the maxim that "where there's a will there's a way." Sewell has chosen to be a druggist—just why we do not know—but surely he was not seeking an easy job. His choice is probably due to the kick which he seems to get out of waiting on the ladies. He is an earnest admirer of sports, recreation, and diversion, and hopes to have his proportionate representation in each, but when he came here he kept away from unnecessary outside attractions and devoted himself to the work which he had before him. Now his records and the friendly smile with which he greets every one are self-evident of his future success.

ROWLAND HILL GEDDIE

Raeford, N. C.

Degree: B.S. in Electrical Engineering

Age: 20

Duplin County Club; University Rifle Club;
American Institute of American Engineers;
Varsity Tennis.

Φ Z N, Φ B K.

Rowland started taking Commerce with the class of '25, but saw the error of his ways and decided to become an engineer, with the class of '26.

Always ready for fun, or work, as occasion demanded, he has made many friends in his five-year stay with us. These have been busy years for him too, as can be seen by the things that he has accomplished. He made Phi Beta Kappa in engineering, the varsity tennis team, and had plenty of time to spare for trips to Greensboro, where that girl lives.

His ability to take his place in so many fields of our activities will be reflected in his life, and we feel sure that by his winning ways and strength of character, he will gain the friendship of the world into which he is now entering, as he has our own.

HUBERT LONG WALKER
Summerfield, N. C.
Degree: Ph.G.
Age: 20

We hail Hubert from Summerfield. And to hear him tell it, it is a darn good town "to be from." He is a jolly good fellow and has made a host of friends since his arrival at Carolina. We can offer Hubert but one criticism, and that is not succeeding or failing to pass Dean Howell's quizzes.

He is a great admirer of the fair sex if, as he says, they are built right. He spends much time in telling what an ideal woman should look like. Further he stoutly defends a woman's rights to change her mind, but admits she might use discretion occasionally.

As a pharmacist, Hubert is sure to be a great success, for he has the qualities which his profession demands of him—efficiency, speed, courtesy and a smile for every one.

We do not know where Hubert will establish his drug store force, but wherever he decides to locate we can only predict a drop in business for the other druggists of the lucky town.

JOSEPH NEAL STAMPS
Yanceyville, N. C.
Degree: Ph.G.
Age: 21

After graduating at Mars Hill College "Joe" decided that Pharmacy was the line for him. So he came to Carolina, and now he is one of the most skillful in wielding the mortar and pestle.

He is a good student who says it is all in knowing how and studying at the right time, but we imagine he has a great source of inspiration away from the Hill by the number of notes he gets bearing the Lumberton postmark.

Besides being a good student "Joe" is a good fellow and is liked by every one who knows him. He works when it is necessary, but when it is not, he is always ready for a big time, or to join in a "session."

By the way he handles the problems which he comes up against in college he will certainly make a great success in life, and we are expecting great things from him in the advancement of the profession of Pharmacy in the coming years.

Here is a boy who hails from the mountains of Carolina, and like most mountaineers, he really likes to work. Jack formulates his ambition and then drives ahead to attain it, no matter how hard nor what obstacles are in the way.

Engineering is not his only suit, for this man from Hendersonville is a real Romeo. At present his heart is in South Carolina. However no one can say how long it will remain there, for women are his long suit.

Jack Conrad Fred holds the distinction of stopping the Carolina-Virginia basketball game; for when a freshman he was perched on the ladder of Bynum gymnasium when the support gave away and he landed in the middle of the floor to the consternation of all. This is truly a new Carolina record for Jack.

BINGHAM ROBERT DOWNS

Asheville, N. C.

Degree: A.B. in Education

Age: 23

Dialectic Literary Society; Buncombe County Club.

The strength of the hills is his character, their change his variety, their beauty his disposition. Mediocrity he despairs, and superiority marks his achievements. As a student and thinker Dowus has distinguished himself during his stay at the University. His quiet reserve, his ready wit, his appreciation of real humor and his abundance of true common sense makes his personality sought after by those who know him and appreciated by acquaintances. Not only has Downs been an excellent student, but as a library assistant he has made a real contribution to his fellows. His University career has been further varied by a summer spent in Europe. Whatever he undertakes, his success is assured. He delivers the goods.

Here is another proof that "still water runs deep." Entering the freshman class as one among many others, Jeff gradually took such a hold on the regard of the student body that they gave him the highest honor in their power to bestow. He created no noise in the process, but a combination which carried with it prowess of first rank on the athletic field, and the second highest grade in his class was bound to win its reward.

Underneath the exterior of brilliant ability, there lies, after one has come to know him, a human warmth, a keen wit, and, speak it softly, favor with fair ladies.

ROBERT LEE SMITH

Degree: B.S., Commerce
Age: 22

By his outspoken nature and simplicity of manner, Bob has won for himself a host of friends and admirers at Carolina. Even casual acquaintances know him as a fine fellow, while a more thorough knowledge of him reveals an original and winning personality which is hard to beat.

Summer school and French 5 held no fears for Bob—he did not have to attend the summer schools but woe unto French 5.

Never seeking an office, never wishing to occupy the spot-light, caring not for passing vanities and unstable glories of campus honors, Bob has breezed through four years at Carolina and has come out of Dad's School of Commerce ready for the cruel business world; and here's hoping for him great success in what ever field he may choose.

"W" the important letter in Weeks and wholesale—not to mention cow-feed and women. "W. G." entered the University under a handicap. Coming from a town with an unusual representation upon the campus, it was required of him the real stuff to receive recognition. He has borne the burden well. Gordon has probably played no stellar role in any single activity, but the Alma Mater is losing in him one of her few well rounded students. His energy and ability have not only caused to fall upon him much of the responsibility of the success of the activities in which he was engaged, but has also brought him honors in each of these. His college life forecasts for him a journey along the road to success.

When the poet penned those immortal words, "I am the master of my fate, and the captain of my soul," he must have had in mind such a man as Ralph.

"Yank," as he is better known on the campus, has made his time worth while during his stay at Carolina, having unlocked Dean Carroll's four-latch gate in one quarter less than the required time.

The course "Yank" specialized in was friendship, and he has made a score of friends since he said good-bye to "Little Old New York" in the fall of 1922.

"Yank" proposes to enter the field of foreign trade, but we don't see how he can since Burlington isn't in a foreign country. Be it Burlington or South America, we predict that the same qualities that made for his success here will continue with him in the bigger fields of life.

This man is a math shark and a bridge hound. He is one of the few men on the campus who can play tennis all afternoon, catch the Pick, play bridge until eleven and then make Phi Beta Kappa. But you wouldn't know this unless some one told you, for he is one of those quiet, serious fellows who never say much, but say a lot when they do talk.

During his last year with us Bob has developed the habit of leaving the Hill every week-end. No one knows what is the cause of this, but he is the kind of boy who will bear watching. Whatever your calling may be, we wish you a world of luck.

JASPER CARLTON JACKSON

Cooper, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 22

Carlton, better known on the campus as "Johnny," came to the University not merely to say that he had been to college, but with the intention of gaining great access to the knowledge of Pharmacy, which he has chosen for his future career. (His intentions were not to receive high honors, but to receive the best training possible in this line of work. He has consumed a great deal of "midnight oil" in order that he might arrive at the goal that he has reached.)

"Johnny" is always contented and looks on the bright side of life. He is always ready and willing to help any one in any way that he can. He always greets one with a smile, which has a deep and lasting impression. He has gained many friends while in the University. It is not known where he will locate after leaving here, but we are quite sure of his success wherever he may go.

ADDISON ALDRIDGE WALL

Filled with the fire of youth, an ardent love of life, and a great desire for intellectual freedom, Addison is a man to be admired. Generous, philosophical, with wit and humor and the cherished charm of personality, his nature stirs the better depts of ours, and his many close friends prize his company.

He has never sought elusive campus honors; rather he has preferred to remain a free individual, educating himself as he pleased. Carolina has thusly meant much to him; four years spent in an intelligent pursuit of life, liberty and happiness.

"Add" is a scholar and a gentleman. His friends will never forget him—his optimism, his wit, his common-sense interpretation of the gentle art of living, and life will hold much in store for him.

Charlie has a contagious laugh—but you can't tell whether he's laughing with you or at you. He never seems to worry about anything, not even his studies, which by the way, he passes with very little effort. His chief pleasures are shaking the light fantastic foot in the "Charleston" and playing bridge with thirty-two cards. He passed his junior year at the University of Virginia, attaining dignity and taking courses in Education in order that he might pass his senior year in an appropriate manner at Carolina.

Charlie doesn't know what he's going to do after he graduates; his enormous number of friends sincerely hope he will not have to work so hard that he can't visit Carolina on festive occasions to make us merry with his laughter.

Craig is a perfect gentleman, and has won many friends on the campus by his sterling qualities, his unselfishness, and his ideals of manhood.

As for the future—if millions come by rolling pills, we see Craig as a retired Pharmacist.

"Gick," as he is known to his classmates and friends, has qualities to be admired too numerous to tell. The most important of which are his pleasing personality and sincerity.

All who know him easily recognize his sterling qualities as the superfine type and rest assured that his future will be a bright one. Just why he was inspired to be a druggist we do not know, yet his interest has been proven by sticking to the course. Here's hoping that he will always be a member of the profession. We are proud of his interest and feel sure that he will do much toward elevating the profession he has chosen.

"Sparks," as he is known to his college friends, lives up to his name, for he never fails to fire when it comes to making friends and good grades. He first invaded the University with the sole intention of becoming a teacher, but after looking the hard-boiled pros in the face for nine months, he decided that he much more preferred to look in the faces of the fair sex who assemble in the drug stores.

Ellis is not a sheik, but with his winsome smile and pleasing personality we feel sure that he will have no difficulty in finding his "better-half." His record at Carolina predicts for him a wonderful success.

Ray came to us in the fall of 1923 undecided as to his career in life, but after one year of academic work was led to believe that his life would be happiest spent as a Pharmacist.

If you are looking for a quiet, good-natured sort of chap, here he is. By his outspoken nature and simplicity of manners, Ray has won for himself a host of friends at Carolina. Even casual acquaintances know him as a fine fellow, while a more thorough knowledge of him reveals an original and winning personality which is hard to beat.

Orator, debater, executive, gentleman, and friend—such is S. G. Each class feels that he belongs to it though none lists him among its members.

Coming to the University in the spring of '24 after a splendid career at Mars Hill, he has both distinguished and developed himself along many lines, and yet found time to be a genial good fellow. Chappell knows just when to assume dignity or to put it off. It will be a hostile environment indeed wherein he will not be at home, for he never loses himself in his surroundings.

We not only wish for Sidney success, but we expect it of him. And so our confidence in his future lessens somewhat our regret at losing his company.

WILLIAM HUGH RICHARDSON

Hugh, familiarly known as "Rich," flew in from the city of Wendell. The first that we knew of him was when he started asking question of the instructor that we didn't have the courage to ask ourselves. Without "Rich," we don't know how we would have succeeded in learning anything.

Our most persistent and conscientious worker, he has steered safely past the pitfalls of a Civil Engineering course without a ripple on the surface of his majestic brow. A true and loyal friend, long suspected of being a "heart-breaker" and yet his own heart remains intact. We predict for him a glorious success in his chosen profession.

Luke hailed from Robeson only four short years ago. As a student, he has delved into the mysteries of the commercial world with unsurmountable energy and has reached a solution that comes only to those with a purpose. He has proved himself very capable for the task before him by his integrity and sturdiness of habits. Luke is a free and sound thinker and admits only those facts to be true, unless they are beyond a reasonable doubt. Based upon these merits we feel sure that he will scale the ladder to success with but few halts; and those, only for a firmer grasp upon its rungs. His host of friends wish him the greatest success.

"Mackie" entered the University as a sophomore, not because he was sophisticated or anything like that, but because he went to Guilford College three years and qualified only as a sophomore in the engineering school.

Don't look at him, ladies, unless you feel romantic, because his brown eyes, graceful manners and wonderful personality would make a regular old ironside feel cheerful. "Mackie" can catch thirty-five hours of classes, prepare his lessons, take numerous trips with Mr. Weaver's singing crew, play the mandolin as a Spanish lover, catch dances and make good grades. We will call him a well-polished engineer and bid him "God speed."

Carolina has ample reason to felicitate herself for having been able to attract this magnanimous citizen from "The Biggest Town of Its Size in the State." Throughout his college career Hal has proven himself to be a very capable student, and one who can accomplish a surprising amount of work in a miraculously short time, without letting N. C. C. W. suffer.

His decision to devote his efforts toward obtaining a C. P. A. came only after he had taken a number of Latin courses in the A. B. school. We have here, then, a rare combination—an accountant whose daily parlance is interspersed with epithets from the ancients—a prince of a fellow who will be long remembered.

MARKS BROWN SLOOP

China Grove, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 22

There was a knock at the portals of Carolina—the door was opened—and Marks had arrived to be with us for a sojourn of two years. Having entered the vast gates to the realm of knowledge, Marks immediately began a serious study of his chosen profession. The route has been, perhaps, a trifle rough and misleading, but the disillusionments have produced a specimen of manhood worthy of representing his Alma Mater. His has been a very conscientious view of the task to be completed, and now the rewards will be amply deserved. While extreme regret over the departure of Marks from the ranks fills us, yet we realize that sooner or later each of us must join the great throng of humanity to do our bit.

So Marks enters the realistic world with a sincerity of purpose and jovial personality which, if I mistake not, bespeaks success. Good-bye and good luck!

One of the best things in life is association with worth-while companions, and we thank our various gods for the opportunity of knowing Monk. A serious minded, yet fun loving boy, with a definite goal set for himself and a wealth of determination to reach it, he has yet found time to enter into the spirit of college life, and to prove himself a cordial and sincere friend to his intimates, and a cheerful acquaintance to the school at large. How he ever finds time to keep up his Pharmacy work and still write such voluminous letters to a certain young lady in Roxboro, we have never been able to ascertain. It savors of magic, and perhaps is a result of his close application to the mystic art of Pharmacy. At any rate, we are sure that the campus has been just a little brighter, and the atmosphere just a little lighter as a result of his presence, and the best wish we can give him is that he may never lose his sunny smile and cordial manner.

EDWARD LUTHER BRADSHAW

Age: 21

A bare two years ago a very handsome young man boarded the train in Burgaw with a ticket to Chapel Hill and a head full of hopes and ambitions, leaving behind him a multitude of lonesome and broken hearts. It was reported that the tears of the fair maids of that village ceased only after a passage of many weeks. But ambition must not how to love, so this fair campus received unto its bosom one who is destined, to, some day, be seen in the Hall of Fame.

Edward's strongest point is confidence. Wherever or whenever you see him he always has a smile on his face even if he does have to worry over the fair dame who awaits him and Dean Howell's lectures. His personality and good nature explains why he has such a host of friends.

As Edward is about to begin a long journey through the professional world, we wish him much success in all his undertakings and that the friends he will make later will be as numerous as the ones he leaves.

"Lindy" is wealthy in his friends and a man whom we will always recall with pleasure because of his unassuming ways and freedom from ill-speaking. "Lindy's" favorite prescription follows; we hope he will dispense it as freely in Indiana as he has in Carolina:

After his training here, Campbell should be well prepared to assume an important position in the ranks of the real estate peddlers of his State. Failing that, he might easily become president of any or all banks in the neighborhood of Lake Wales, having become so proficient in the art of accounting and bookkeeping.

Outside his studies, in which Campbell has excelled as an honor student, he has made friends with dozens here who will always remember him as one of the happiest, most generous spirited men they have ever known. Mr. Webster's little book does not contain words which will really describe him, but we all wish Campbell the best we can—that he be as successful in the professional world as he has been at Carolina.

Wherever he goes his smiling face and ever-ready greeting to those he meets, bespeak the winning personality that is his. Prominent on the campus in various capacities, he is outstanding, inasmuch he never begins a task without seeing it through with that sense of trust and honor that characterizes all worthy men.

It is with keen regret that we see Jack leave old "Carolina," replete with cherished memories of days of happiness; and yet we feel that life beyond the pale of college ties holds shining opportunities for him to continue the worthy account begun here. It is rumored that Jack's affections and interest are centered on a fair young lady in western Pennsylvania, and to her we extend congratulations and best wishes for the future.

There are some students who do their work so quietly and well and say so little about it that their friends are sometimes surprised to find that they belong to Phi Beta Kappa. Jack is this type of boy. Nor is he quiet only in his work; he has gone through his college career in quiet prominence in those activities which interested him, much as the skillful diver splashes the least water.

During the past four years he has devoted his latent energies to the courses offered by Dudley DeWitt's School of Commerce, sometimes called the School of Jewish Engineering. If he can accomplish as much in the world of business as he has in theory in the Commerce School he will some day control a great many of those elusive but desirable dollars.

Herman is one of those clean, honest, good-natured, clever Carolina boys whom people in the State hear very little about. Besides being all this, he is a good student, a good mixer, and a good friend to every one he meets. With his abilities, he could easily have ranked among the leaders of the campus, but his modesty would not permit.

We do not know what his ambitions are, but we are sure he will succeed in whatever he undertakes. To a man like Herman success is just a matter of fact.

"Covey" hails from that section of the Old North State famous for cotton mills, peaches, and "peaches." Possessed of a high sense of honor, a never-say-die—say damn-spirit, a fair sense of humor, a keen intellect, and an ever-ready smile, his long list of friends is not to be wondered at.

"To be or not to be" a juggler of facts and figures was a problem that gave him a bit of trouble at first, but fortunately for the School of Commerce he cast his lot with Prof. Peacock's "figgerin" boys during his Sophomore year.

"Covey" is one-half backbone and the other half grit as forty-four courses with an average just below that assigned to "book worms" will prove.

It is rumored that he is a "woman-hater," but his art gallery and the number of letters post-marked in a certain village of Eastern Carolina contradict any such impression.

Every one who has been intimately associated with "Les" has become attached to him, and even those who are only acquainted with him admire his courage and ambition. There is not a more active or indefatigable worker than he in the class of '26. Any one who can conquer successfully such subjects as German, zoology, and chemistry while at the same time taking an active part in every activity which comes along holds a fair claim to the title of "a versatile man." In the midst of all this he did not forget to read all of Shakespeare's plays, major in history and make the Dean's list. We are sure that the medical profession will certainly number in its ranks an able worker, a born scholar and a scientist of high ideals when "Les" takes up his chosen profession.

It would take more than a paragraph or two to tell all that we know about this gentleman, but we must heed the advice of the Latin proverb, "Concerning the dead, say nothing but good." We presume that this goes concerning the graduating too.

We have heard that Joe did not make Phi Beta Kappa because he did not want to. He was afraid that book knowledge would interfere with his business activities. What we wanted was to learn how to become a business man, and we must break down and confess that he has been successful.

Here's to you, old dear, we hope that you will be as successful in making friends and shekels in life as you have at Carolina. What is more, we believe that you will.

"Eddie" spent two years in the school of arts, and became a freshman in the engineering school with the class of '26.' This man has proven himself the speediest of the fourteen Civils; because he can work his problems and comprehensively read his assignments in much less time than any of the other thirteen.

Off classes, "Eddie" spends his time in the "Gym," and during his third year at the university became a wearer of the N. C. His friends believe he is trying to persuade a member of the fair sex to become Mrs. Smith, but "Eddie" says it's an unattainable aspiration. However, we wish him success in this and predict a successful future.

"Scotty," as he is affectionately known by his classmates (but more affectionately as Bernard by the girls), has shown during his four years with us that he is capable of taking a man's place in the world of Engineering—by his scholastic average, by his many friends, and by his enormous capacity for doing work. Neglecting a career in baseball for one in Engineering, he has shown that he possesses the interest and qualities necessary to serve humanity as an Engineer—namely, "Stickability," "Cheerfulness" and "Unselfishness." "Scotty," the world is yours for the taking. Our best wishes go with you, but watch Danville.

Age: 22

If you are looking for a quiet, good-natured chap, here he is. Tilley hails from Bahama, the social center of Mangum Township, Durham County. He has proven himself to be a good scout thoroughly capable of delivering the requirements of an engineer.

Tilley, of course, has the habit of catching the "Pick," and the hobby of sleeping through his eight-thirty classes. This young man is quite a sheik, and when around the ladies he seems to be vaccinated with a phonograph needle; but his "line" is very effective and the veritable "fall line" is never far distant. So; for this ambitious, generous son of Carolina, gifted with the cherished charm we call personality, we predict success and much joy, which are well deserved.

"Doc," as he is familiarly known among his legion of friends, early decided that he wanted to be a dentist. But this ambition was changed for Pharmacy, and the habit he soon acquired of "knockin' 'em cold" on quizzes, exams, etc., in the Pharmacy school proves his wisdom when he decided he could compound drugs more easily than he could extract defective molars.

"Doc" didn't return in '24, but he took a great step forward that year; he is now proving to us that one can be happy, though married, and that two can live as cheaply as one, etc., etc.

We predict that the town in which "Doc" locates will have at least one excellent Pharmacist.

Alden entered in the fall of '23, but he didn't return in '24; he went to Washington, N. C., to get more drug store experience.

The worries that are supposed to halt most of us and turn our hair gray are jokes to this young man. He it is about whom it is originally said, "He doesn't cross his bridges until he gets to them." Not that he takes life in a spirit of frivolity; far from it. He merely discards all unnecessary burdens. He has the knack of distinguishing between what is essential and what is not.

(There is a rumor floating around to the effect that the experience he got in "little Washington" during the year '23 was not all acquired in the drug store.)

Norman entered Carolina with the class of '26. That has been a good while ago. Yet, to the senior as he reminisces, it seems an incredibly short time. To many, the number of things left undone appear multitudinous, and how many of us wish that we'd used our time for such a good advantage as have some of our classmates, as for instance Norman. He has attained a high scholastic standard, so high that he will be eligible for Phi Beta Kappa at the end of the Winter Quarter, made friends, for his cheerful disposition, personality, and sincerity could only attract, and taken advantages of the opportunities that college has offered. Upon his graduation the comment of those who know him will be, "There is surely one will bring credit and honor to himself and his Alma Mater."

Four years ago there came to Carolina a boy of exceedingly good qualities: a good mixed, a good student, and a good fellow. As a student, he ranked far above the average; for he captured the honored Phi Beta Kappa without keeping his nose in a book all of the time. He had time for the activities; also for dates and for writing the Tri-weekly News Letter to the girl back home. Picking "crip" courses was not his aim, or he would never chosen Accounting as his field.

With the passing of a man of his caliber into the business world, C. P. A.'s must watch out; for some one is sure to lose part of his business.

HOWARD EDWARD GRUBBS

Howard Edward Grubbs is this "Son of Carolina's" name, and he is of that caliber of personality that grows on you. As an introduction the following is the expression of Howard's classmates of '26; Amiable, quick, unassuming, intelligent, and one of the most dependable men in the class. When it comes to "Bull Sessions," this gentleman has a tremendous volume of eloquence unsurpassable. This eloquence convinced many of the High School Students, where Grubbs taught last year, that he had great ability as a teacher. "Carolina" has promised him an A.B. degree this June which has been won in three years and two summer schools; and good grades have been his hobby during his academic career.

In conclusion more than one of the class of '26 will follow Howard with genuine interest as he achieves the success that is surely his.

Fitting in on any occasion that might arise, Bruce has made himself a valuable friend of a large number of men in his own school as well as in the other schools of the University. Although doing his work conscientiously at all times, he can always find time to become one of the group of pleasure seekers when called upon.

"Garber" breezed through Dean Howell's Pharmacy school and turned in a gentleman's grade at the end of his course. For two years he has sat through lectures of Pharmacology and Chemistry and rolled pills in Lab, with the sole ambition to get back to his room and bed. Yes, "Garber" loves his bed. His affection for it is a touching thing, and he has often remarked that if they had given courses in sleeping he would have made Phi Beta Kappa. Though he has so peacefully slept the hours away, he has his share of friends who wish him success in his career of selling Pinkham's Pink Pills for Pale Puny People.

Really and truly we hate to think of your leaving us, Maurice, and we certainly are glad that you come up for your educational pill at the same time that we happened along for ours. Those who know "John M." by speaking acquaintance alone see in this apparently easy-going son of the Gate City a serious minded follower of the transit. But back of this professional demeanor there is another personality, which may not at all be indexed by the big, horn-rimmed glasses of Engineer Foushee. True it is that his love of studies, fondness for engineering instruments, and knowledge of his future profession are not at all shamed. Rather they are accentuated and made even more pronounced by the other side of "Foush." His love for fun and merriment is best known to his most intimate friends, yet there have been instances of his escapades becoming widely known.

We are sure that Foushee, the student, and Foushee, the life-enjoyer, are mixed in such proportions as to Foushee, the successful engineer.

This marks the passing of a student who has reaped his reward through his quality of tenacity. His name is not written on the athlete's page, but is deeply engraved in the hearts of his many friends. To know him intimately is but to cherish him more dearly. He is self-reserved, truthful, dependable, and believes in waging his own fight against the many obstacles in life's path.

No game, tug-o-war, or snow fight, has ever been staged on the "Hill" which has not been viewed by this biped. Sure, he's an excellent snow-baller; but not capable of lowering the flag of '27' all by himself as he once attempted to do.

Guy is intending to teach school for a year or so, and we prophesy that he will drill into the minds of his students two things: the value of hard work and the name of U. N. C. We commend this stalwart "Guy" from Beaufort County to the cold, wicked, world because we know that by his rare qualities he will climb high on the stairway of fame.

And if he is not smiling he is usually whistling. Many a time, in the wee hours of the night, the occupants of the quadrangle are awakened by this returning gallant. This leads us to his secret. "Cap" is one of those who believes the State should unite N. C. C. W. with the University. "For," he says, "many a day I have caught classes at both places."

He loves activities and has that fine combination of being able to obtain a "college" education along with his studies. We find him in many branches of campus life—always an interested and congenial worker.

He has made friends by the score since coming here. Sometimes when he is meditating we wonder whether "Dean" or the little girl is about to get the upper hand.

Polite too, despite the fact that he has attempted through three years to assist in satisfying the yearnings of an impatient mob of knowledge seekers by dispensing Einstein, Milton, Elinor Glyn, and other classicists over the library desk.

He says the Medical School is his goal. Good! His capabilities are limitless, and splendid success and recognition await him. There's one born every minute, but all are not gifted with a combination equal to "Red's." Not only is he, with his sandy locks and winning smiles a ladies' man, but a sure-seeker of "Math." He even knows Spanish, Latin and "Codism." The latter is his major "hobby." But he hasn't succumbed to feminine enchantment to the degree of hindering him from work.

Glenn said "he once was young and foolish" by entering Dr. Poteat's Institution of Learning, but upon answering his better judgment, found that Carolina was the place for him, and we are lucky to have had his true friendship and worthwhile association.

But aside from "shooting the bull" about being from Goshen, he is a fine fellow, sociable, a good sport; and in fact an all 'round, trustworthy friend.

It has been said that "a friend in need is a friend indeed." To those who have known Bruce during his four years at Carolina nothing can be truer. He is always ready and willing to help his fellows along.

Slow and easy, and as steady as the Rock of Gibraltar—these are the qualities that won for him the nickname of "Old Reliable." Open-minded and willing to grant others their views, but unshaken in his belief and faith, Bruce is a true disciple of the old order.

Bruce doesn't wear "Oxford bags," but don't conclude that he is a woman hater; he is extremely interested in "Queens."

WILTON BALLANCE ALREDGE

To fulfill a cherished philosophy that a man is a man because of the kind of education which he possesses, Wilton chose a path of thorns, and made of it a bed of roses. Running the gantlet of four years in commerce, he has ended the race with a record stamped with ability as well as information. In spite of his practical application to an intensive line of study, Wilson has gone far into the realm of friendship. His cheery smile with a slap on the shoulder has won for him a number of friends and a kind of friendship that few can claim. May the reputation he has won in college give him a shove past the knocks in life that he may gain an even more enviable record in the years to come.

Mabel has upset the dope on two counts. She is a coed both brilliant and charming, and a Phi Beta who is human. In fact, so lithe and ingenuous is she that it seems a bit incongruous to classify her as Phi Beta. Of a brilliant family of brothers who have distinguished themselves for scholarship, she has ably demonstrated that the female of the species is in no manner inferior to the male. But she has demonstrated further to the cynical wag that a genial disposition and a winsome personality may go hand in hand with her other attributes. Mabel set out to be a botanist and became one—a good one. But she changed her mind and went into library work. We decline to predict how soon she will exercise again this prerogative of woman and enter a gentler and more customary profession.

His major study is English and his hobby is music. He sings second bass, but his favorite pet is the Hawaiian guitar. By his musical ability and charming personality he makes a hit with the fair sex.

"Ro" is one of those few students that Carolina will miss, for his place will be hard to fill and his equal hard to find.

His favorite pastime is reading historical documents. He spent a year in the medical school and learned from Dr. "Charlie" how to trace "nerve impulses." However, his favorite subject is History: here at last he found his hobby. A good student, true friend—we wish him success in his future career.

If it takes a pleasing personality, an ever-ready friendly word, and a lending hand in the time of need, to make a good fellow, "Hart" can truly be called a prince of good fellows. He has brought personality into the class of '26, and it is with a feeling of irreparable loss that we see him go to Philadelphia.

Hartwell is running true to the old maxim "Tel pere, tel fils," and for the past two years has been delving into and conquering the mysteries of anatomy, physiology, pharmacology and the other medical sciences, and has made a record which speaks well for his success in his future studies and in his practice.

But speaking about the women, and "Hart" certainly does love to speak about them, his light blue eyes, wavy hair and captivating smile "knock 'em cold."

Although "Hart" is leaving us, we know that North Carolina holds an enchanting charm for him, and so, although we say "au revoir" with regret, wishing him the best of luck always, we do not say "adien."

We have an idea that, if we could gaze into the far past and examine Tom's ancestral tree, we would find somewhere a Spanish Duke. Tom bears all the marks of a Latin; he is quiet, easy-going, wise, and the impressions that he makes on his associates are not easily forgotten. In his quietness, like the quietness of deep water, Tom thinks deeply, and whatever he says needs not to be said over. Again, like a Latin, Tom possesses a composite nature: he is a poet, lover, student, and philosopher. He has original ideas on the subject of love, he writes love lyrics to a certain dark lady, and, at the same time, he grabs ones from the hardest pros on the hill with ease.

Tom has a very high interest in things Spanish. He has acted as chief executive of the Spanish Club, he knows all about bull-fighting and Don Quixote, and speaks the language with both hands. What's more, he rivals Valentino as a dark, banjo-playing, lover. We are sure that Tom's many friends at Carolina will never forget him as "El Espanol."

Hamp, we usually call him Roomy or something worse, has a flair for almost everything. When the coach remembers the widows and orphans and sends the scrubs in for a few hectic moments he loops them in from all angles. John Booker suffered a psychopathic lapse and handed him Phi Beta on the proverbial platter. The Publications Union would die an unnatural death if Roomy were not on hand to keep the business managers straight. Still and all, he will sit in front of the graphophone and play "Whispering Trees" while he reads affectionate notes from Stuart Hall and sheds whole gobs of impassioned tears. It is not a glycerine complex; it is simply the incurable romanticism which goes with the girlish crime wave in his hair.

Accounting, then, is his occupation, four hands of bridge for ice cream is his avocation, and flappers, poor lad, are his weakness. Woodberry's loss was Carolina's gain when Russ entered the University in the fall of '22. At once he took his place as one of the leaders of his class, and has continued as such through the past four years.

Russ can do anything from singing duets with Runt Lowe to playing a crack game of football. For the past three years he has been Coach Bob's pride and joy in the line.

In the social field, Russ has been very prominent. His name appears upon the rolls of practically every social order on the campus. All the girls who haven't met him want to know who that handsome boy is with black curly hair and big blue eyes.

Russ plans to enter the banking business where we are sure that he will be as successful as he has been in his college career. We are sorry to see Russ leave the University and we wish him every success in the future.

Several years from now we expect to see in the papers the following; "James B. Bullett Discovers New Elements," because every one is predicting a brilliant future for him in his chosen line of work. In addition to being a real chemistry "bull" Jim has those qualities that make him one of the best known and most popular boys in the class of '26. Quiet, unassuming, he doesn't talk much, but when he does he has something important to say.

Besides earning a Phi Beta Kappa key, Jim has had time for outside activities. He is an expert boxer and is equally at home in the ring, where he is as fast as his name implies, or on the dance floor, where he has captivated the hearts of most of the "fairer sex"—but alas, his cold and indifferent bearing has caused most of them to give up hope of ever being the favored one.

"Shorty," as we have wont frequently to call him, came to us from the land beyond the Blue Ridge, or to be more specific, from that particular spot known as the Swannanoa Valley. Shirlen has been essentially a student. And while he has not bothered himself as some of us have with campus fads and political problems, he has been a loyal member of the class of '26. He has proved himself a rare and congenial friend, and what is more to be admired, he has the happy faculty of holding those friends. We have the utmost faith in his abilities, and we believe that whatever work he may choose, or whatever task he may turn his hand to, he will be successful.

Though one could hardly describe "MacKyver" as "a leader of men, women, and dances," as was written of a former Carolina student in a similar sketch, still he has had much to do with the dances, has probably induced a few men to be led, and as to the fair enchantresses of our other sex—well, there has been quite a bit of leading on both sides; for, "Parchi" is an attractively lazy Southern gentleman whose religion is procrastination. Yet, we all know that it takes time to produce good stuff, and so, as is customary on such occasions, we predict for him a great success in whatever his chosen field may be.

While he has been here though he has acquired his quota of friends, and we will miss him after leaving.

After becoming familiar with and learning what Pharmacy is, Ed. is ready for this tough, old world of ours, and we will not be surprised in a few years to be startled by his announcement of some great cure he has discovered. We leave him wishing every success and fortune that he could desire.

"Dope's" quiet, serious and thorough treatment of the problems which face the Carolina student is strongly opposed to the North Carolinian's idea of the usual high strung and rantankerous South Carolinian.

Since coming to Carolina "Dope" has emerged from a meek freshman into a serious, scholarly senior. His scholastic standing is far above the average. His participation in numerous campus activities has made him a leader at the University. We think he is symbolic of the best products of Carolina.

His very pleasant and congenial nature and personality have won for him a wide circle of friends who will all regret to see him leave Carolina; but we all feel certain that he will do the University and himself honor wherever he goes.

At present he is planning to take graduate work at Harvard before entering the business world, where we wish him every possible success.

Charlie may not be the handsomest man in the class of '26, but he will give somebody a race for the honor of being the most energetic. He even attacks his accounting courses, the pride of the school of commerce, with undiminished activity. Coupled with this, he has an irresistible personality and a deservedly famous "line." When Charlie gets behind a proposition it is a signal for all its opponents to withdraw to a great distance.

Even the fairer sex have not proved immune to his onslaught. His numerous trips to Virginia have never been uneventful. The only hitch in his well-laid plans has been that his intimacy with the long distance telephone operators has caused him some slight embarrassment in his relations with the lady of his heart.

Charlie has not made his million yet; but when he descends upon little old New York with a cigar stuck in the corner of his mouth in true financial style, Wall Street had better wake up and take notice.

"Doc," as this man is commonly called, has indeed made a name for himself at Carolina, for he is one of two men ever to make the coveted "N. C." monogram in the gymnasium during their freshman years.

His hobby is a strange combination—women and freshmen, particularly the latter. His sole purpose during his four years at Carolina has been the betterment of the physical welfare of freshmen. His untiring labors in Doctor Lawson's Gym have been for their benefit. He actually lives to help the new men. He is not only looked up to by the freshmen, but is also respected by those upper classmen who know him, and is considered a man of sterling quality. It is when we see him listening to a phonograph record by Caruso that we are most positive that he is a man of deep feeling.

Dave is a quiet, steady-going fellow, who has, during his four years sojourn on the "hill" won the respect and admiration of all with whom he has come in contact.

During his freshman year the thing that was apparently uppermost in Dave's mind was the national pastime, baseball, in which sport he showed himself most proficient, being a member of the freshman squad. But, sad to relate, Dave's eyesight caused him to abandon baseball in his sophomore year. One's eyesight, however, doesn't hinder one from becoming a track man, and Dave, through his ability as a broad-jumper, was awarded a monogram last year.

In passing it may be said that Dave has never neglected his studies (except on certain occasions), and as a result, he has built for himself a foundation that will stand him in good stead when he settles down on his farm in Wilson County.

Billy is a well rounded person and his attainments indicate that his diploma means more to him than a receipt for four years of pleasure-seeking. But this does not mean that he has been a book-worm, for in his businesslike way he makes good use of his time, apportioning it mainly between studies, performing in musical comedies, and cutting a neat social figure here and elsewhere. His success in all of these fields indicates that he will enter the field of his chosen profession, medicine, and make a great go of it.

"Hank" attributes his immensity of stature to milk, eggs and oatmeal, but he fails to give us a formulae to explain his immensity of spirit, ability and heart. In fact we believe "Hannibal Nero" (some believe this to be his real name) conforms to no set laws of experience. He's just "Hank"—and furthermore he's different.

As editor of the greater University's greater Tar Heel, "Hank" has written editorials that makes one sit up and take notice. Relentless enemy of co-education (not co-eds, girls), critic of athletic coaching, detector of bootleggers, antagonist of the Carolina Magazine, co-conspirator of yellow journals, Editor Parker has always held firm to his conclusions and convictions even though the storms of criticism have descended and the winds of wrath have blown. That he, through the columns of his paper and in many other ways, is a force on the campus, is not to be denied. His ability as a writer and his other achievements were recognized at the close of his junior year by Golden Fleece, which tapped him into their fold. That recognition has been continued and accentuated this year.

This young man, who is informally known to us as "Bob," is at home anywhere on this "terrestrial" globular, planetary hunk of matter, slightly flattened at the poles and known as the earth.

When you are ushered into Bob's abode, he doesn't look at you as if you were something the cat dragged in from the garbage can, but he always has his ears rehearsed for a good story.

Bob's chief stumbling block has been in the form of French, and he admits that he hasn't any more use for it than a snake in the Sahara has for snowshoes.

In his social whirlpool, we have to admit that Bob knows his stuff, and he has acquired the insatiable habit of loving them all, but we predict that his lease on paradise will soon be changed to a first mortgage, and Cupid will throw him for a loss.

We will always remember Bob as one of those likeable chaps who is always busy, but never too much so to be sociable.

It is with deep regret and sadness that we think of the parting of the class of '26. And when we came to say good-bye to Marvin we realize this sadness still more keenly. What praise can we give him that would not be fittingly deserved? Perhaps there are others more popular, perhaps others with greater achievements, but when popularity is long since dead and achievements faded, we will remember one generous, unselfish nature, who has won the friendship and respect of all those who have come in contact with him. His willingness to aid others; faithfulness and trustworthiness in everything he undertakes, has already assured Marvin of a success in life in whatever field he may enter.

"Tub" hails from the Land of the Sky and Home of the Tourists. After working a few years in Pharmacies in North Carolina and in the far off Windy City he decided that he was cut out to be a Pharmacist. Then he came back to his native State to study the "whys and wherefores" of the profession.

While here he has gained prominence in the Pharmacy school, and popularity throughout the University. Making friends seems to be "Tub's" habit.

He had received his preparatory training at Berea Academy in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky. He tries to fool himself with the expression, "No, I don't care anything about the wimmen," but the expression on his face when he opens his numerous letters, belies his tongue. He has decided to return to Carolina next year to get his M.S. and to gain further knowledge with which to make his mark in the world.

FRANK LEROY BLACK

Degree: Ph.G.
Age: 22

Black does not have a nickname, when he came down here as a freshman we tried to think of some appropriate campus appellation. Some suggested "Red." We submitted the proposed title to Black's consideration. He positively refused any such name because according to him his hair was auburn—far from being red. Later we suggested "Fnuzz," and this he flatly refused. After all, we could not improve on his name. Black is a mighty common name and it fits him to a "T."

When it comes to the fair ones and light wines—well, what do you say Bo? He favors them both, and believes that some day light wines will take their rightful places in the American people. For, according to Black, it sure will give you a kick, just to take on a little before going into the boxing ring. It makes the blows fast and heavy.

We understand Black is going into the profession of Dentistry. The thought of those anatomy quizzes would give us a nightmare. Black does not give them a passing thought. He made a first down on Dean Howell and a touchdown on Dobbins. To him Dentistry will be a cinch. Go it, Black. We are betting on you.

Some two or three years ago we were dallying around Emerson Field one spring afternoon and we could not help but notice five or six runners progressing steadily around the big cinder track. This procession was led by a rather young looking boy, not bearing the appearance of a racer, but wearing an expression of keen determination on his face. As the racers tore down the home stretch, the scattered spectators cheered the fellow in the lead and he continued to leave his opponents steadily until he broke the silk thread five yards ahead of the nearest man.

And that is Lambeth. He is not aggressive, but possesses steady, cool, almost deadly determination. When he decides to do a thing, he does it, and does it with such ease that the effort is not apparent. There you have the man that will not be forgotten by those who have associated with him at Carolina.

Elm City, known for its prospective oil wells and red heads, four years ago donated to the University one of its latter members; and nothing better could any town have given, as will be attested by any one who has known "Red" personally.

His four years here have been busy ones. He has been prominent in scholastic work and athletic activities, missing Phi Beta Kappa by only a history course, and being a prominent member of the wrestling squad. Besides these he is connected with several other organizations on the campus.

"Red," with your personality and common sense, we know that success is yours wherever you may cast your lot.

His theory is that labor brings success, and he has proved to be a worthy addition to the class of '26. His winning personality has caused him to make many true friends on the campus.

Shang's greatest failing is the fair sex —we understand some feminine hand guides his destiny.

Lorraine refuses to divulge his secrets, but we understand the law school is to have an addition.

Possessing a high sense of honor the determination to win, a keen sense of humor, and a ready smile, we predict for Shang a signal success in the battle of life.

"S. P." or more frequently "Sandy," besides being an admirable product of Eastern Carolina, is a fellow who can be depended upon as a true, sympathetic and conscientious friend. He solves his own problems, if he has any, for outwardly he is always demonstrating a ready wit and good humor that help give him an enviable attitude toward life.

Sandy makes good grades with ease, but he has not bonded himself to any particular activity in the University. He came here to get a good all-round knowledge; and, toward this end, with his fine ability to mix work and play, he has been successful. He is one who has preferred to withhold his talents because of hesitancy to thrust himself on a critical public.

Floy says she is going to be a schoolteacher. There is no doubt but that she will make a good one, but you know that even school-teachers are not immune to the darts of Dan Cupid, and we dare say that some day he may conquer Floy. Any way, we hope she will like whatever occupation she chooses after she leaves us, and feel sure that her ways will win her as many friends in later life as they have in her youth.

"Tim" has made a very good impression during his two short years with us. He possesses that rare charm of personality that is sure to win him friends no matter where he may go. Among his greatest achievements while at Carolina were his scintillating performances in intramural athletics.

Clark has been an ideal student in the "pill rolling" department of the University as is shown by the apparent ease with which he passed all his work. It is rumored that he plans to form a partnership when he graduates. She must be a queen, for if frequent correspondence counts for anything he has a large field to pick from.

Industrious, congenial, loyal, he is bound to succeed. Luck to you "Tim."

Bodie came to Carolina with the greenness washed off—after two years at the Naval Academy. He immediately entered into all kinds of activity. He dabbled in athletics; he made love to all the women in sight and to lots whose names he didn't even know; he led dances and led in parties of all kinds; he has not neglected the cultivation of a business face (otherwise known as a "poker face"); and he has given his studies a fair share of his time—during the week of examinations only.

Bodie enters the Law School next year, and after the well-rounded college career he has enjoyed he should be a top-notcher. As a "bull-artist" his fame is wide, and his numerous friends have no doubt of his great success in his chosen profession.

Conservative and well balanced, Jim is an exponent of the doctrine of "laissez-faire." His calm, easy-going ways make for him a winning personality. With a cheerful smile for everybody and a ready word or joke for his friends, Jim has spent four years here making friends so fast that he couldn't count them if he tried.

To be sure, you'll find him at every social festivity. He is in his prime at such. His suavity is both admired and envied by all would-be social leaders.

We marvel at the ease in which he made such good grades in the Commerce School. He has developed his natural business talents to such an extent that his destination seems to be the president's chair in a big textile company.

The goal of Diogenes's quest and philosopher extraordinary. Such is this son of the Land of the Sky. There must be an intangible something in "them that hills" which has brought him a little closer to the real values of life, for his life is the best exemplification we know of the things that really count. And in his thinking nothing has escaped. He either has built or is building a philosophy on everything. This is coupled with a strength of character, strict control of self, and consideration for others which make him admirable. And he may well be considered as "The rose and expectancy of the fair state," for as the future Pulitzer of Dixie or as governor of the Old North State he will be of a type of practical dreamer of dreams which will be the leader of the New Day in the South.

Look at him, girls. Do you recognize him? You guessed it; he's the sheik of the Pharmacy school. He likes the girls and they love him (all except one who likes horse trading better). However, he does not live by love alone, and has time for many other things. The Pharmacy school loses one of its most distinguished members, and the world gains an excellent pharmacist.

As this lad was roving over the southern part of the State, he heard faint whispers of the University of North Carolina, a school that would satisfy his greatest ambition, that of becoming a Pharmacist.

George's sunny disposition and friendly attitude, along with his big heart and many other noble characteristics, have drawn around him a host of friends because they know that they will find him the same tomorrow as they found him yesterday. We feel sure that his desire to roam will not last long and he will settle down to confer the "M. R. S." degree upon some fair damsel.

He possesses the laudable trait of obtaining the maximum of a course with the minimum of effort. While his studies are hardly secondary in consideration, they seldom are of enough importance to warrant missing his daily "Pick."

One should not keep the impression that his neat appearance and clothes "men will wear" are for nought. Each day finds him many epistles, usually of l' amour, from fortunate maidens of far and near.

In consequence, we may add that his sparkling personality and keen intelligence, particularly in analyzing existing business conditions, are gentle reminders of the great future that lies in store for our sincere friend.

Leaving Wittenberg College in Ohio, Dud, had his choice of schools. After two years at Carolina he admits rare judgment in his selection. Like most students, Dud came here primarily for an education. This is evidenced by the fact that he made the Dean's Honor List for scholarship every quarter.

But don't get the impression that Dud wasn't one of the "fun-loving Rovers." He became an addict to "bull sessions" and so respected were his opinions and so creditable his philosophy that he was looked up to as a Solon in his art. As a teacher of the "Charleston" he excelled, and his instructions were much sought after. We wish he could have spent more than two years with us.

"Bob," as he is affectionately known to the ladies, is leaving behind him an envious college career. During his stay here he has made friends in every phase of college life, for he has not allowed his work to prevent him from taking advantage of the things which educate.

He has taken part in athletics of every description, especially the three major sports in the intramural athletics. Each year he has been high scorer; but it seems that fate unraveled all her forces to prevent him from coming to the lime-light in the intramural world as on Coach Fetzer's baseball team to which he is a faithful aspirant.

"Bob" is a most persistent worker. As proof of this statement it need only be said he selected as his major subject the terror of the school of commerce, accounting! His aptitude for figures has enabled him to finish with grades above the average; so we tender the hearty wish that it will enable him to rock the rocks of finance.

Charlie is a descendant of an aristocratic family in Virginia, his native town being South Hill. But we notice at present that there is some attraction for this young lad in a near-by Virginia town. Investigation shows "the one girl" is the cause of these frequent week-end trips. And a girl she must be or Charlie would not be so attracted.

But even at this he is not taking things too seriously. He finds time to mix and have a good time with the rest of the crowd.

Charlie's record speaks for itself. It would be useless to make predictions about his future, so we, confidently but regretfully approach the "parting of ways" when his destiny will carry him into other fields.

Emmett is found among all scenes of campus life, and whatever the occasion, from a Carolina-Virginia football game to a Y. M. C. A. meeting, he is a leader. Straight-forward and modest in all his relations he has gained numerous distinctions and has often been honored by his fellow students, not because of any ambitious endeavors on his own part, but rather as a recognition of his true worth and character. Whatever he has been chosen to do he has done well; and throughout his whole career there has radiated among us the influence of a personality that has even striven to accomplish the high and noble purposes in Carolina life. We can truly say that here is a "Carolina" man.

When John entered the University he registered in the School of Applied Science, but later he decided that Pharmacy was the field for him; and judging from the way he manipulates the spatula, we are prone to believe that he was born to become a member of the "pill rolling profession."

The city of Boston evidently holds something of interest to John, for it is amazing the way he sits up and takes notice when that city is mentioned. Although he is of a studious nature, he has always found time to mingle with his fellow-students as shown by his great number of friends, who are wishing him the greatest of success.

"Mac" entered Carolina after he enjoyed many years in historical old Alamance. He came to us with lots of determination and a definite purpose that has shown us he is a man of truly clean-cut character and ability.

Whether in the exertion of physical energy in the "gym." or on a near by country road, "Mac" has exhibited a bulldog tenacity that should be of priceless value in later years. In society halls and debating clubs he has proven himself to be a direct thinker and a talented orator. With the self-reliance he has shown while here, success should be his. We hope fate will never allow him to oppose us in his chosen profession, the law.

"S. B." came to Carolina with the intention of having a good time and at the same time passing his work with a gentleman's grade. He has accomplished his purpose well. He spent three years here and at the end of that time got a chance to enter the manufacturing business. He took advantage of his opportunity because he believed that a little practical experience would mix well with the course that he had taken here. He completed the work needed for his degree by correspondence. During the time he spent at Carolina he made many friends and, considering his other accomplishments, finished a very successful college career.

Here is a fellow who possesses an over supply of energy, as well as an overdose of enthusiasm that can never be dampened no matter how dark and dreary the day may be.

Sam is of a flighty nature and never hits anything except the high spots of life; yet he settled down sufficiently to finish his course in just a little over three years. He did this without picking "crip" courses, too, for he specialized in accounting and "knocked Peacock loose" for an A and many "B's." This boy from Gastonia showed signs of developing into a promising track man, but he suddenly decided to leave this seat of learning for his profession of accounting.

We cannot think of Augusta without bringing to mind the numerous pleasing traits that make up her character.

Interested primarily in human nature, she is a close observer, and the conclusions she comes to from these observations are rare in their subtlety and wit.

We hardly know what to say in regard to this young lady's future. She is preparing for it with a thorough study of Greek and Philosophy. Her ambition to live alone on top of a mountain and her habit of sleeping with a butcher knife under her pillow are rather inconsistent, so we commend her to the gods, and what they are going to do with her only time will tell.

You've often heard it said that the small towns of Eastern North Carolina are noted for their beautiful women. Well, Lillington is certainly no exception to the rule. Coming to us with an enviable record from our sister institution, N. C. C. W., Miriam was quick to win a place in our hearts. We could write page after page about her personal charms and enchantments, but like the artist who lacked the ability to reproduce the true beauties of nature, mere words cannot describe the sweetness of disposition which is truly her main characteristic. Who would have thought that Roy Armstrong's real name was Lee Roy Wells Armstrong! The very fact that Roy has kept this from us these many years gives an insight into the character and personality of this coffee drinking son of Spencer, N. C., home of the famous train hospital. Yes, it's just plain Roy—no put on, no sham, no mockery, but gobs and gobs of overflowing merriment. Men are not only fond of such a combination of wit, sincerity and consideration, but those of the fickle sex fall before its allurements as well. This product of "human nature's daily food" is much sought after by the women, and here too, he is sincere—in his line-shooting. He's free and what's more he's always risking his freedom by going right into the very jaws of Cupid's monster, Love. A wonderful companion, a true friend and a gloom chaser par excellence, that's Armstrong. Can such a combination lack of attainment?

Of all things the world calls red, our hearts claim only that embodiment of aggressiveness and good fellowship—our "Red." However, his heart is claimed elsewhere—Sweet Briar vying with Raleigh for week-ends. This suggests "Red's" social prominence, which, with his athletic ability, ranks first of many achievements. To leave unmentioned his renowned rosebud complexion would be a crime; for here he excels the schoolgirl herself, and has won languishing admiration and envy.

Tobacco and insurance are the two occupations aspiring for our "Rosebud's" choice. However, his acquaintance teaches insurance shall win, for nothing "Red" does will go up in smoke. So, truest of friends, as your golden vessel breasts Life's stormy main, catch a Fair Breeze and happiness to you both.

Garland is one of that strong group that has so well represented Reidsville. You will want to know him, for he has a line you would love to hear. When station G. K. G. tunes in all of the boys get their receiving apparatus in shape for some real entertainment.

Garland is every inch a true Carolina man, and we consider him a valuable asset to the University because of the elevating influence that he has among his fellow students. He is moderate in all of his college activities and has the rare ability of doing the right thing at the right time.

His favorite subjects are radio and the psychology of women. In the latter he is so profound that we are sure that if the University is endowed with a Chair of "Feminology," Garland will be qualified to hold it.

He has conducted himself so as to make his college life pleasant to himself and his student friends. As a gentleman he is nulli secundus. It is easy to foresee that with his personality, coupled with his keen insight into life, he is bound to succeed when he is thrust upon the stormy sea of life's realities.

Ed. Patterson, known to his friends as "Pat," is one of the most versatile and individualistic men on the campus. He has done everything from writing poetry for the Carolina Magazine to gracing the stage in the Playmaker performances. He was a Grecian nymph in the ancient Wigwam and Mask production, "Ye Gods!" and was a rustic farmer in "Quare Medicine." In fact, Pat feels at home wherever he might be. Those who have broken down the barrier of Pat's quiet reserve have found him to be a true and lasting friend. Pat is original in every sense of the word. He never bores his friends by saying the perfectly obvious. In fact, when Pat says something you may be assured that it has never been said before, and, what is more, will probably never be said again. We hate to see Pat leave the "hill," and in going, he leaves a host of true friends behind.

There is a magnetism in her impulsive way of speaking and acting which makes her a charming entertainer.

Drifting around from Education, through Journalism and into Geology and Spanish, she has displayed a trace of natural indecision but an extraordinarily versatile mind. As is characteristic of that mind, she is thoughtful, yet forgetful; steady, yet changeable; and given to many and various moods.

In social activities he has been a leader, and his many friends will tell you that "such popularity must be deserved." Phi Beta Kappa has never been his goal, but possessed with a quick and apt mind, he has maintained a good average in his work. Successes have in no way turned Billy's head.

Oak Ridge must be an exceedingly good prep. school, if we are to judge its products by men like "Mitch." Quiet, studious orderly in mind and courteous in manner, he has glided on and off the stage of college life with the easy assurance of perfect poise. His friends are legion, his enemies, non-existent. Accountancy has claimed him for her own, and the major portion of his time has been devoted to satisfying the demands of his mistress. But he is never too busy to have a cheery word or a cordial greeting for all, and his friends know that they can always count on his support.

Judged from all angles, his life here has been a great success and we can but wish him continuance on the road he now travels.

These things and the fact that he is an all-round good fellow give Cameron a combination that's hard to beat, and he would be a credit to any profession.

As for friends, "Jim" is very fortunate in this respect. He is considered by all one of the most popular men in his class, and from all indications this popularity is well deserved.

It has been rumored that "Jim" finds Chapel Hill very convenient as a place to study, due to the nearness to one who is reported to be his "fair love." At any rate, he doesn't deny this rumor.

Before we ever met Worth, "midnight" meant twelve o'clock at night. Since we saw this modest young man from Newton, midnight means only "Gus" Knox, nothing more.

Worth came here from Newton and entered the Engineering school. He has made an enviable record in his electrical work. From his numerous visits to the Phi Beta Kappa house, we conclude that he is pledged, and will be initiated in the spring.

But even if he does miss this honor, we feel sure that his knowledge of electricity is as thorough as that of playing the flute; and of flute players there is none greater, as Mr. McCorkle himself admits.

Wherever Worth goes, we are sure that he will meet success, for he is a hard worker and a good fellow.

A better friend no one has ever found. Never faltering and never halting on the way. His free and easy-going manner overcomes every obstacle that tends to obstruct his path and wins the high esteem of all his associates.

"Gus" is quite a "Wallacite" with the ladies. They fall for that smiling and independent look. But his attentions are not centered on any definite goal just yet.

Having the necessary qualities of a clean business man, we predict a wonderful success for him.

There came from Leakesville to the University of North Carolina one A. B. Martin, Jr. The University received him and put that stamp, "A Carolina Man," on him. He is just that today, plus all the advantages that can be gained from association with over two thousand students and a few courses. Just a regular fellow with ambition, you might say.

Appreciation of the arts, especially of music and drawing, made "A.B." outstanding on the campus. Along with his degrees he acquired many other titles which the student body was proud to confer upon him.

All in all both "A.B." and the University profited from the four years that they spent together.

Irvin came up here with the intention of getting an education and not merely a degree, and the fact that he has passed off forty-four courses, including some course in just about every subject given, shows that he has fulfilled his intention. His academic work has fitted him well for his future career—Medicine, and if his ability to learn (he has even led us to believe that he understands Einstein's theory), his determination and his love for science, can be taken as criteria of his future in his studies and practice, we can see only success ahead of him.

Irvin's affable temperament, frankness, and striking personality have drawn to him a host of friends, whose consolation on his eve of departure is that their loss will be some one else's gain.

"W. C." acquired the nickname "Whoofus" because of his boisterous laugh. "Whoofus" is a congenial chap, always the same, whether in the classroom, the dance hall, or on the mat. He has a scholastic record almost unequalled. To make Phi Beta Kappa in Civil Engineering is a very difficult attainment, but this boy did it. His reports were late every day but Sunday, but they all came back with A's on them.

A great future is in store for "Whoofus" in whatever phase of Engineering he chooses to pursue. He has the "initiative," as Uncle Gus would say, and it will bring him his M.S. next year and other attainments later.

Twenty-two years ago in Camel Town, a blonde lawyer was born. In the course of time he gravitated to that natural habitat of the legal profession, Raleigh. That is, we never suspected Murk was a lawyer until the beginning of his freshman year; but after that we decided that only a lawyer could cross-question a professor the way he could. We laughed; but today Lewis wears a rectangular key on his watch-chain where we wear nothing.

Murk not only dazzles the fair sex with his key, his blonde locks, his divine prowess, and his inimitable "line" are irresistible. But after Murk had worked all the problems the engineering school could furnish, he became stuck on a certain feminine problem, and although the slide rule has slipped and slid, he is still in the air.

But Murk will come out eventually. He can come out on top of anything we have seen yet.

"Charlie" is a rare one—a potent "line," a mountain of energy, and a winning smile. Coming to Carolina four years ago with ambition enough for two freshmen, he has been a go-getter ever since.

"Here's the proposition" is his motto. Among the propositions he has put across are founding the Carolina Buccaneer and leading in the successful reorganization of the German Club.

In the meanwhile he has found time to transform himself into "Old Imes" and "Doctor Emanuel" for the Playmakers. Nor has he neglected the acquaintance of professors and co-eds.

When Charlie gets a whack at the world, two things will happen shortly: he will convince some young lady that he has a good proposition for a life partnership, and he will make Jefferson Standard insurance policies as popular as tickets to the Carolina-Virginia game.

Four years ago "Criss" rode the w.k. "dinky" into Chapel Hill in search of a college education. This June he rides out in his own Ford sedan with a college diploma resting on the seat beside him.

Although one of the busiest boys on the "hill," "Criss" has never been too busy to make friends. Few students, if any, are wider known and better liked than he. "The gentleman is a man of truth, lord of his own actions, and expressing that lordship in his behavior." Foscue does nearly symbolize this ideal from Emerson, for no man has ever possessed such a wealth of nonchalant geniality, and succeeded so gracefully in favoring his associates with just the right amount of wit, sympathy, and familiarity so as to leave behind him a host of admiring friends.

"Foss" at one time had aspirations to follow his father's profession—medicine, but being of his intense and thorough nature it looked as though the work might be detrimental to his health; so he will soon become a "captain of industry" through the practice of Dean Carroll's School.

Hill is the happy combination of seriousness and fun. He is a serious-minded and hard worker, but is never too serious to see the humorous side of anything, nor too busy to help in any way that he may be able. He is the type that makes a true and loyal friend and one whom we hold in the very highest esteem.

Burke is one of those big, quiet men from up in the more mountainous section of our State. Here on the campus he has had little to say, and has been rather a listener than a talker. When he first came to Carolina we pictured him some day as wearing a Phi Beta Kappa key, but although he has missed that honor he has done well in his work.

During his sojourn on the campus he has made many friends, and all who know him like him. His application to duty and his determination to successfully finish everything that he starts out to do is bound to win success. We believe that he will be a credit to the University and the State when he takes up his life work in his field or profession.

Claude came to the University in the fall of '22 from Mars Hill, where he had won the distinction of being a conscientious student. Since he has been here he has devoted himself diligently to his work, but he considers a trip to Greensboro every other week a part of his work. It is reasonable to agree with him, for we contend that a student should early make preparations for the future. He has sought no campus honors, but he is a fellow who goes after that which he wants with the determination to gain it, so we expect great success from him as a diagnoser and giver of pills after he has finished the next step in his education, which is a four-year sojourn in medical school.

It would be impossible to give this gentleman the usual stereotyped write-up and come anywhere near the truth. He has a pronounced individuality. We do not mean that he is selfish or egotistical, we mean that he is different. He does not follow the leading of the common herd, nor does he mind breaking precedent and bucking criticism. He decided that four years was too long to hang around the "hill" and be exposed to a measly A.B. Therefore, he finished in three years.

Ed. is one of the best and most lovable characters that we have ever known. His very presence is a pleasure. He has a quiet, unassuming air that gives the impression that he knows all about everything, but is just too modest to demonstrate his knowledge. His vocabulary is the marvel of the man. When talking with him it is necessary to have a copy of Noah Webster's handbook handy.

We hope to welcome him back as an embryo lawyer next year. If he is leaving us for good, we are sad and lament his going. If he comes back to us, we are glad and rejoice. Isn't that enough to prove that he is a true friend?

They were so favorably impressed with his ability that they sent him to Carolina to become an engineer.

He has made an enviable record here—a record which few have equaled, especially in the engineering school; and now after having learned to curb the hyperbolic oscillations of the unruly electrons, he is seeking new worlds to conquer. His numerous visits to N. C. C. W. lead us to believe that his conquests will not be entirely confined to engineering. In fact he is known to his friends as the "Sheik of the Hill," and he well deserves the title. His winning personality suggests mysticism, and of course a woman's curiosity cannot resist that.

His neatness of appearance, his calm and easy manner, and his sincerity have made his presence at all social functions a necessity. He is well liked among his classmates in the Pharmacy school and by all others on the campus. He leaves a host of friends and admirers at Carolina, and possesses a strong character and a vital personality. He has a smile that is winning, a "line" that is pleasing, and more fair friends than a fellow can very well keep track of. Any descriptive words concerning Stratton are inadequate without being laudatory and glowing to a certain extent. Stratton came to U. N. He is a worker in the highest sense of the word. Among his friends and associates his opinion is highly respected, because it is known that he works and thinks. His duty in regard to his studies is his first concern. The "Stern Daughter" can find no fault with him.

Along with the above Stratton has a charming personality. He can see both sides of a question and is a good "mixer."

In many respects one might believe this, if Julian is taken as a model representative of the county. Yet construe this not to mean that he is old-fashioned. His dignified bearing and winning personality would win him favor anywhere. One can hardly believe that a man so quiet could be so obedient, but his prominence in the Phi Assembly will bear that out. There are two "Parsons" Moss in Chapel Hill. This is the other. Both are well known, and are friends worth having, but this one limits the size of his congregations to one person.

We understand that Parson intends to seek foreign lands after he has been graduated. There are two reasons why he is going and neither of them is singing.

Parson was at one time one of the great unwashed at N. C. State, but he reformed and decided to get his engineering knowledge here. He came over, and great was the benefit that we, the Engineering School, derived therefrom.

If "Cliff," as he is familiarly known by his many friends, makes as great a success in life as he has made in the Pharmacy school, he will be one of the leading pharmacists in the metropolis of High Point, which is his native heath. Although "Cliff" is a rather studious young fellow, he finds plenty of time to devote to other activities. He is one of the most ardent athletic fans at Carolina and he has missed very few athletic contests during his stay on the "Hill." Here's luck to you, "Cliff," in everything that you undertake.

No member of the Class of '26 has enjoyed University life more, tasted more of college sweets, and contributed more to the upbuilding of the Campus than "Heinie." His natural abilities and talents have given him power to cruise on a very large plane of activity; his personality has brought him honors at the hands of his fellow students; and his love for and interest in the University and the Campus, and his healthful attitude toward college life in general has led him to work hard in many capacities and organizations.

His character and high scholarship have won for him the respect of his classmates, and his friendly and sincere bearing their friendship.

Bill Player comes to us from the Presbyterian College of South Carolina. While here he has made many friends, and it is a pity that he can be with us no longer than this year. Bill is something of a poet, and is no mean hand at playing the saxophone. He takes an interest in all kinds of literature and is a consistent reader. With the qualities that he has, he should become a prominent journalist, which is his chosen profession.

Bill, one might say, is old for his age, being only nineteen and having accomplished as much as he has during his college life here and his three years at Presbyterian College. Bill is probably inspired by a little girl back in South Carolina, for although he lets us know nothing of her, we notice that he receives letters from time to time written in a delicate feminine hand.

Here's to you, Bill. May success and happiness be yours.

"Punk" Wood is one of those individuals who breezed along in the academic school content and lucky if he got a 4 on a course. But Punk came into the medical school with a square jaw and a lot of determination and he has surprised everybody, most of all himself, for he has consistently made A's. They say that when "Punk" made his first "A" there was much muttering and disbelief among the Student Council, and quite a sensation was caused by it in Edenton.

But we who know him best know that "Punk" has the stuff." After all, success in life is but the end-reaction of the solution of finding one's life work—and "Punk" seems to have done this in following "ye olde Hippocratean profession." So we predict that he will go far in his chosen field. Any way, "Punk" we're wishing you the best of luck, always.

This young man, who is informally known to us as "Bill," is at home anywhere on this terrestrial globular planetary hunk of matter slightly flattened at the poles and known as the earth.

Entering the University in 1922, he has made a brilliant record as a baseball pitcher, which insures him a place in the Hall of Fame.

Though the maids of Norfolk were forgotten in the cruel task of achieving success in Accounting, not so with those of other cities, for soon Bill began to worship at the Shrine of Venus in none other than the City of Industry. Like a sailor with a sweetheart in every port, he has a girl in every town.

We are looking for things from "Bill" in the field of business, his chosen profession. Here's wishing a real Carolina man the best of luck.

LESLIE CALDWELL LOGIE

Manatee, Fla.

Degree: B.S., Electrical Engineering

Age: 22

American Institute of Electrical Engineers;
North Carolina Rifle Club.

And now, friends, you are looking at the likeness of a sunny son of Florida, who came to us four years ago to make an electrical engineer of himself. That he has succeeded in this without materially increasing his meager stock of curse words, proves beyond all shadow of doubt that Florida real estate occasionally produces something more than alligators and sword fish.

While with us, "Loag," has somehow found time for a little studying, a little play, more than a little "bull slinging," and quite a great deal of traveling to a well known city of this State. It is rumored that he has a girl somewhere. If so, she could do a great deal worse.

In conclusion, Old World, with sincere belief that here is one who will influence you for the better, we release for your approval one whom we have learned to love and respect as a very dear friend.

CECIL ROTERING MCAULAY

Huntersville, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

"Zeke" hails from the little town of Huntersville, the cradle of track men." Although he has not performed on the cinderpath, he is a four-letter man of Swain Hall.

He is endowed with a superabundance of wit and humor, which makes him a most admirable fellow. He is never too busy to relate or listen to a joke, but when the time comes for hard work he faces it with a smile. With such an attitude, he will easily override life's obstacles.

He has not participated in many student activities. Rather his spare time has been spent trying to shorten the distance between Carolina and that "Queen" at Queen's College.

SAMUEL EDWIN TATE, JR.

Mebane, N. C.

Degree: A.B. in Education

Age: 20

Mebane sent us "Ed" and it's right proud we are of the gift. He has the reputation of carrying four courses with more ease, and having more time left over, than any other man on the campus.

Math is his favorite sport and many are those who have him to thank for their safe journey through the perilous quick-sands of Math I and II. But his ability is not limited to any one field. He is an all 'round good fellow, an ace with the ladies, and a whang in a bull session.

We hate to lose him, but he has promised to come back to Med. School two years hence—that is if a certain "Jane" doesn't upset this ambition—anyway we wish for him all that he deserves, and that is much.

ROLAND FORREST JONES

Knoxville, Tenn.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Rollo roled into Chapel Hill after he had decided that anti-education laws were spoiling his home state of Tennessee as a field for other activities than Mammy-songs. That act was typical of Roland's individualism and he has continued his dodging of pressures since then (to the relief of the editors of the Carolina Magazine).

As a result, the literati have found some one they couldn't lord it over, Dean Hibbard has found some one to put on the Dean's List, and we hoi-polloi have found a friend to help us with dates, take the last drink with us, and kindly and considerately put us to bed.

Senior Class History

THE Class of '26 entered the University in the midst of The Great Expansion. The Quadrangle was first occupied, Saunders and Murphree first shook under volleys of professional thunder, in that year. The Wonder Team played for us, led by Grady, and bumbled every opponent save Yale. Monk thrilled us with his famous 95-yard run in Raleigh during Fair Week. The Sophis were not so fearful as he had been led to fear—and there was no snow. This year saw the final burial of the tradition that Freshmen must wear some kind of a hat—any kind—on the campus. A special issue of the Tar Heel thundered unsuccessfully against the building of a Co-ed Dormitory here: Campus vote, 173 for, 937 against.

Pelleter was elected our President by the Freshman Debating Club; but he stayed with us only this year. The Graham Memorial building was proposed.

We came back to the Hill the following year with the fall of the leaves. This quarter for the first time part of our number were initiated into the Holy Mysteries of Hellas with the usual hokuspokus and crucifixion of the flesh. The Revolt of Youth came to Carolina when the organized Freshman class won a crushing victory in the annual snowball fight without an initial defeat. In the winter quarter the basketball team won the Southern Championship, and the campus went wild. Few will forget the bonfire at the Old Well, and the march on Durham, with the University Band, "to let the world know," and to serenade the father of Spratt Cobb. In the spring the first Smoker of our College career was planned, but frustrated by the partial burning of Swain Hall. Late into the night students all over the campus were interrupted by members of the class selling the hundreds of sandwiches which had been bought for the smoker. Another fire burned the Pick, and its flying cinders carried consternation to Fraternity Row. This year saw Steve Brody and the Bell Weevil finally fall before faculty opposition. Earl Hartsell was the family physician who ushered the Carolina Buccaneer into this fleeting life. The Publications Union reached the matric age of one year during this period. Lewellyn, Bryson, and Wilson handed Virginia three shut-outs amid general rejoicing. And let us not close the history of this year without chronicling the death of Leetle Dammit. Are there none left to keep green the memory of Leetle Dammit? Excavations were made for the Graham Memorial Building.

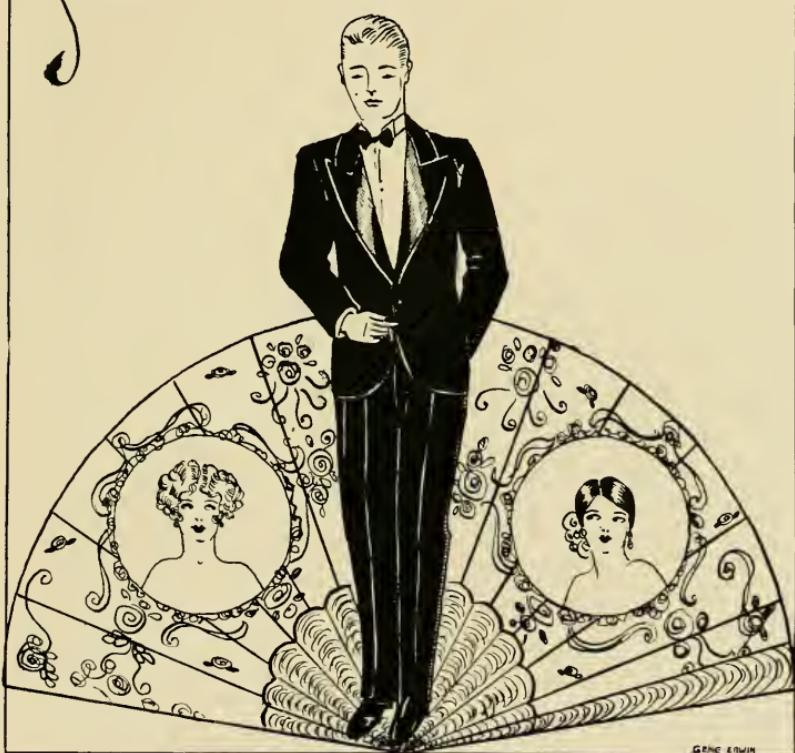

The Junior year was a busy one. Jeff Fordham led the class. The literary societies reformed, but still languished. The Co-ed House burned but the bath tub was saved. The new Co-ed dormitory was already under construction at the time of the fire. The basketball team won the Southern Championship again—but Mr. Cobb came to Chapel Hill "to save the boys the trouble of walking to Durham." Troublesome times came with the session of the Legislature, and the Poole Bill threatened the intellectual life of the University. Dr. Greenlaw was elected president of the American Association of Universities—and left the University for Johns Hopkins. The Glee Club blossomed, and went to Kansas City. Phi Beta Kappa elected more men from our class than from any other previous one—nearly forty men. Only one person was defeated in the Spring elections—an amazing record; everything was "fixed," and by election day there was but one candidate for each office. The Graham Memorial achieved a roof.

Our Senior year was—well, our Senior year. Lawrence Watt was our President. President Chase frightened us with a trip to Oregon, but elected to return to Carolina. The literary Societies showed alarming symptoms, but refused all nostrums offered. A vigorous campaign was carried on against mud—Cameron Avenue was paved. Something happened to Old South. The basketball team won the Southern Championship for the third consecutive time. Construction of the Graham Memorial building was temporarily stopped.

At last the End came, that end of all things from which all things date. The Real History of the Class of '26 will now begin to be enacted. One thing at least we have learned during the last four years, and that is the Reality of Friendship.

Baseball—The Season

THE 1925 baseball team, led by Captain "Rabbitt" Bonner and coached by Bill Fetzer, started the season like "a-house-afire," and gave promise of over-shadowing most of the famous Carolina teams such as those led by such famous players as Manley Lewellyn, Mule Shirley, and Fred Morris. On its annual Northern trip this team took the State of Virginia by storm, winning from the University of Virginia, from V. P. I., V. M. I., and W. and L. The teams of Georgetown and Maryland were also easily subdued on this trip.

The team, after winning 13 out of 14 games, seemed to feel the power of the "proverbial unlucky 13." Every member of the squad went into a hitting slump, out of which it seemed impossible to emerge. Naturally it is impossible to win baseball games without any hitting, and the games were certainly lost. While in this losing streak the team lost two games each to Duke, Wake Forest, N. C. State, and the University of Virginia.

Although the season as a whole turned out to be a rather mediocre one, some promising material was developed, and this material should form a nucleus out of which a good team should be developed next year. The most outstanding of these men are: Jonnie Johnson, captain-elect and all-state shortstop; J. B. Hatley and W. A. Dodderer, outfielders; Buck Stanton, Sentelle Jones, and Bob Sides, infielders; Bill Sharpe and Monk Greene, catchers; and Bill Poyner and Herman Holshouser, pitchers.

The 1925 season started off with a bang. Hampden-Sydney, the only team met in Chapel Hill before the northern trip, was easily defeated. During the encounter Carolina scored 14 runs to 5 for the Virginians. Ferebee, Coltrane, and Hatley ushered in the season with home runs.

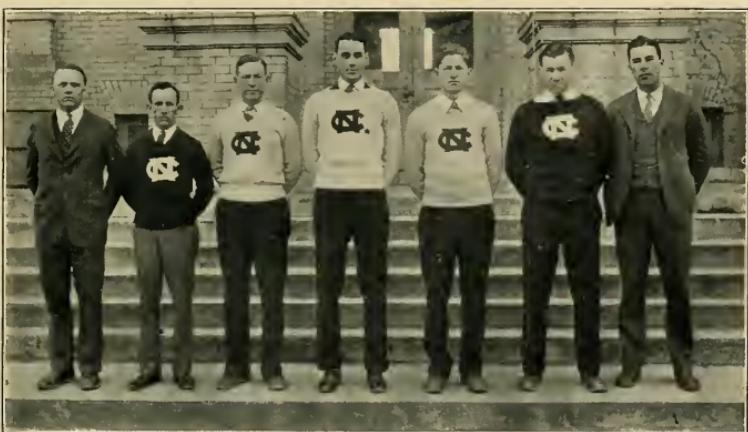

Starting on the Easter holiday trip, Guilford was met on Good Friday in Greensboro and was licked by the Tar Heels 5 to 4. Carolina met the University of Maryland team the following day in Greensboro and handed the "Old Liners" the little end of a 2 to 0 score. Easter Monday found the Tar Heels in Salisbury battling the Davidson "Wildcats." Herman Holshouser, Carolina Sophomore and pitching ace, pitching before his hometowners, easily held the Davidionians in check. Carolina won the game 8 to 3. The next day Guilford was met in Greensboro and was again defeated 3 to 2. Then followed the long successful northern invasion. V. P. I., V. M. I., W. and L., Virginia, Georgetown, and Maryland were all defeated by decisive scores. The University of Virginia game was a corker, and was won only in the eighth inning after Stanton and Johnson hit homers with men on bases.

Back home after their successful trip, the team took their first game from Lenoir-Rhyne 5 to 4. Following this game two losses were suffered the same week. Duke won the first by a 5 to 2 score; and Wake Forest copped the other 2 to 1. The latter was a pitchers' duel between Holshouser, Carolina star, and Sorrell, Wake Forest man. After this heartbreaking game the Tar Heels came back the next day and beat Duke on their own home ground.

V. P. I. came to Chapel Hill the first of the following week and carried away a 5 to 4 victory, getting revenge for a licking at the hands of the Tar Heels earlier in the season. In the Elon game all the lads seemed to get control of the old "hitting eye" for one afternoon. Carolina scored 20 runs, and before the game was over it had turned into a "competitionless Track-meet." This was the last victory for the team throughout the remainder of the season.

On Monday N. C. State came over to Chapel Hill and ran off with a 7 to 5 score. The Friday following this Mulligan Holland, captain and star pitcher of the University of Virginia, brought his Virginians down to North Carolina for a couple games. The first was played in Chapel Hill and Holland held the faltering Tar Heels to four scattered hits. The Old Dominion lads copped the game 4 to 1. Saturday the same teams traveled over to Greensboro to play off the tie, each team having won one of the three scheduled games. A hectic battle it was; the teams, playing before three thousand of the country's most beautiful maidens, fought long and hard before a settlement could be made. The game was a perfect pitchers' duel between Darlington of Virginia and Holshouser of Carolina, but Darlington's teammates proved to be a little more skillful at base running and at ball hitting than the Tar Heels. Virginia won the game 2 to 1, and with the game went the series. This was the first baseball series Virginia had won from North Carolina in seven years.

There followed three successive losses to teams within the State. Wake Forest took the first 3 to 2, and the Raleigh "Technicians" bagged the second 8 to 5. In the final game of the season Duke came over and humbled the Tar Heels 10 to 5. The retiring captains of the two teams, Bonner of Carolina and Dempster of Duke, each heroes in many encounters, were the individual stars of the game. Dempster, besides pitching a masterly game for the winners, was largely responsible for the heavy scoring of the Methodists. He figured personally in practically every tally, hitting two home runs and one double for his share in the afternoon's fight.

The Season

TENNIS at Carolina, despite the fact that our lads have never had a coach, has always proven a decided success, and the 1925 season was no exception. In the North Carolina Inter-collegiate Tournament held last year in Chapel Hill, the Doubles Team of the Tar Heels reached the finals, but were eliminated by Davidson. Two Carolina men reached the finals in the "Singles Play." In the play off for the championship Captain-elect Whitaker won out over Captain Solomon.

On the annual spring trip the Tar Heels won from Georgetown and St. Johns, and lost to Swarthmore and the Navy. After returning to Chapel Hill from their Northern trip the Carolina "Racquet wielders" took on both Duke and Wake Forest and defeated them by decisive scores.

This past fall the Tar Heels have continued their winning. The day before the big Carolina-Virginia football game the Carolina Net Stars defeated the "Old Dominion" Stars 4 to 2. The following week Wake Forest was defeated 6 to 1; and the next week, in the Middle South Tennis Tournament held in Pine Hurst, the Carolina entrants came out very successful. The Doubles team eliminated all competition and emerged from the tournament with the Winner's Cup, while Elgin, fighting in the Singles Matches, fought his way to the finals before he was eliminated.

The prospects are exceptionally bright for an excellent team this spring. Captain "Hap" Whitaker is out practicing and is showing the boys how it should be done. The following "tried and true" men are out and are fighting for a place on the team: Elgin, Geddie, Cone, Blaylock, Harvell, and Bullock. Before the season is over this assemblage of stars will very likely show this section of the country some real tennis. We are predicting a brilliant season for our Net Team.

1925 TRACK TEAM

Track—The Season

FINISHING the season as State champions, as South Atlantic champions, and as runners-up in the Southern Tournament, the North Carolina Track team ended the season of wonderful success. This team, led by Captain Dale Ranson and coached by Bob Fetzer, won six meets and finished second in one and third in the other. Southern and State records have fallen at every turn, broken by this array of North Carolina racers. Holt Moore, high scorer for the season, has bettered the Southern records in both the low and high hurdles several times this season; and twice Andy Bell lowered the record in the mile, only to have his own record broken in the Southern Meet. Ambrose, MacPherson, Jonas, Bell, and Moore have lowered the State records in the following respective events: the high jump, the century dash, the half mile, the mile, and the low and high hurdles.

The Tar Heels started the season with a bang, winning easily from Washington and Lee in the first meet. The Generals came down to Chapel Hill picked to win the meet by a good margin, but when the evening ended they were the proud possessors of the little end of a 77 1-3 to 48 2-3 score. In this meet Holt Moore lowered his own records in the hurdles, and "Cholly" Jonas and Andy Bell set new State records in the half-mile and the mile respectively. Jeff Fordham was high scorer of the meet, collecting 15 points during the afternoon.

V. P. I. was the next victim. Records continued to fall as Andy Bell set a new Southern record in the mile and as "Cholly" Jonas lowered his own State record in the half. The final score was 93 1-2 to 32 1-2; Jeff Fordham was again high scorer.

For the first time in the history of Track, North Carolina was able to overcome the University of Virginia, runners in a dual meet. The Tar Heels met the Virginians in Charlottesville during the Easter holidays and ran off with an 83 to 43 score. Gus MacPherson was the stellar performer of the afternoon; he won first place in both the hundred and the two-twenty yard dashes and tied with Holt Moore for first place in the high hurdles. Ambrose was another star of the meet; he raised the Carolina high jump record several inches in this meet.

The day following the Virginia meet, minus the aid of Captain Dale Ranson, Bell, Buchanan, Purser, Moore and Jones, who were in Atlanta winning the Georgia Tech four-mile relay, these racing North Carolinians met and defeated William and Mary College 83 1-2 to 42 1-2. Saturday of the same week N. C. State came over to Chapel Hill for a dual meet and was defeated 79 1-2 to 46 1-2. Holt Moore did his best work of the season in this meet, lowering his own Southern records in both sets of the hurdles. Tom Edwards ran a great quarter in this meet and Bell and Jonas continued their fast work.

In the State Championship meet, held in Chapel Hill, the lads from U. N. C. again came out victorious. For the fourth time in as many years Carolina won the State Championship Meet. N. C. State, Davidson, Wake Forest, and Duke finished behind the Tar Heels in order named. MacPherson of Carolina and Bryum of State tied for first honors in the hundred yard dash, setting a new State record of 9.9 seconds for the event. Bell and Jonas lowered their own State records in their respective races, and Holt Moore finished first in both the low and high hurdles.

In the Triangular Meet with the Navy and Maryland Carolina tasted her first defeat of the season. The Navy lads won the meet with 81 1-2 points, followed by the Tar Heels with 37 1-2 points; Maryland trailed with 15. In the Track events the Southerners were superior; but the midshipmen, garnering 5 of the 6 field events and taking a few second and third places in the races, assembled enough points to win the meet by a good margin.

The Tar Heels faced a similar situation in the Southern Conference meet; they were too weak in the field events. The Mississippi Aggies won the meet with 29 points, closely followed by Louisiana State, North Carolina, Vanderbilt and V. M. I. in the order named.

Outstanding Carolina men in the tournament were: MacPherson, who finished second in both the dashes; Moore, who set a new record in the low hurdles and finished second in the high hurdles; and Purser and Bell, who finished second and third respectively in the two-mile and the mile runs.

1925 FOOTBALL SQUAD

Three Hundred Ninety-three

Football 1925

THE University of North Carolina Football team, after getting off to a bad start and losing to the Wake Forest "Baptists" 6 to 0 on our home field, made one of the greatest comebacks ever known in the history of North Carolina football. Fighting with their backs to the wall and with the State Championship seemingly lost, the Tar Heels won every remaining game of the season with the exception of the Virginia game, which resulted in a 3 to 3 tie. After Wake Forest was defeated later in the season by N. C. State and tied by Davidson and after Carolina had downed N. C. State, Davidson, and Duke by decisive scores, every newspaper and sports writer in the State gave the State Championship, and along with it the Championship Football Cup, to the Tar Heels.

Finishing in first place in the State race and in third place in the Southern Inter-collegiate Conference race, Carolina placed several men on the mythical "all-state" and "all-southern" elevens. Practically every man on the first team of the Tar Heels was mentioned on some one of the many "all-state" selections, but the following were mentioned on every popular team: Captain McIver, Robinson, Whisnant, McMurry, Underwood, and Bonner. Captain McIver, Robinson, and Underwood were placed on many of the "all-southern" picks.

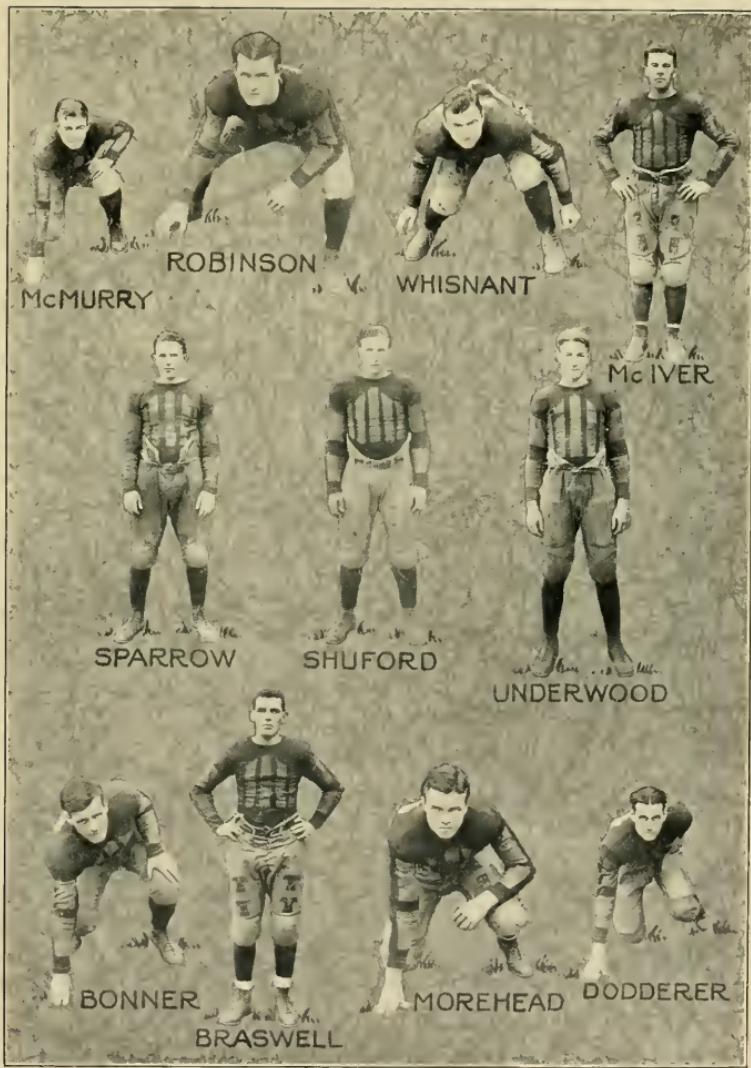

With only two weeks of real practice the Tar Heels attempted to entertain the Wake Forest Deamon Deacons on Emerson Field, but the latter proved to be a little more rude than the Tar Heels had expected. Perhaps the wearers of the Blue were a little over confident; but no matter what the reason, the fighting Baptists left the field on that eventful afternoon, carrying with them the heavy end of a 6 to 0 score. Emerson, Wake Forest tackle and star linesman, blocked a Carolina punt on our own two-yard line and Ellebe, Wake Forest end, fell on it. Then followed the only score of the game; Chackles tore through the Carolina line for a touchdown.

The next Saturday the Tar Heels journeyed to Columbia, S. C., to take their revenge on the South Carolina Gamecocks. The game was no walk-a-way by any means; the wearers of the Blue had to resort to Wake Forest's method of scoring in order to get a break. Garrett Morehead, playing his first year on the Carolina varsity, broke through the South Carolina defense and broke up an attempted punt from the latter's 10-yard line. Bill Dodderer grabbed the ball and carried it across the line for a touchdown. Underwood kicked the goal in the try-for-point and the game ended 7 to 0.

Excited by the taste of blood, these "footballing lads" fairly swamped the Duke "steam rollers" on Haines' field the following week. The 41 to 0 score hardly represents the superiority of the Carolina team. There were four different Carolina teams used during the game, either one of which gained at will against the Blue Devils. Underwood, Bonner, and Young were the individual stars of the game, the two former men gaining ground almost at will, while the latter did his stellar work in a few seconds. Tom received a Duke kick-off on his own 10-yard line and returned it 85 yards to Duke's 5 yard line. It was the longest run made by a Carolina man during the season and it was made in the first game in which Tom Young ever took part.

Thursday following, the Carolina aggregation traveled over to Raleigh and met the warriors of N. C. State. The Tar Heels had little trouble in solving the attack of the loudly praised Wolfpack, and walked away with a 17 to 0 score. In this game Shuford and Underwood were the most consistent ground gainers, while McIver, Robinson, and Whisnant were the outstanding forwards.

The week following the N. C. State game, Mercer University held the crippled Carolina team to a 3 to 0 score. The game was played in Macon, Georgia, and practically the entire first team was on the sick list. Shuford, Bonner, and Robinson were out of the entire game due to injuries and all the others were in bad shape.

In the Maryland game the real strength and the true spirit of the Carolina team was brought out. The six first rated backfield men were on the sick list and an entire reserve backfield had to be used during the entire game. The scrubs came through in fine style, however, and bumbled the "Old Liners" 16 to 0. Jenkins and Cobb played exceptionally well in the backfield while the entire line did wonderful work. As a result of the good showing of the Carolina team against Maryland, Captain Emerson, a Carolina Alumnus after whom Emerson field was named, donated to the University a sum of $20,000 to be used in enlarging the Stadium.

On November 6th the Tar Heels journeyed up to Richmond and there battled the "Cadets" of V. M. I. The V. M. I. lads began the scoring with a touchdown in the early minutes of the game, but they were quickly overtaken and passed as the Carolina boys hit their stride. Practically all of the regulars were back in shape for this game, and each one was fighting in order to show the coaches and students that they could play as well as could the scrubs. The final result of the game was never settled until Carolina pushed across a third touchdown in the last quarter. This was one of the best and fastest games of the season; each team presented a good offense and a powerful defense when the time came. Robinson's defensive work in this game was marvelous and probably won for him a position on several all-southern teams; Bonner, Underwood, and Hackney did exceptional work in the backfield.

November 14th the Davidson Wildcats made their first visit to Emerson field in several years, and here they were turned back by the fighting Tar Heels. The game resembled the V. M. I. game very much, each team using a hard, driving offense and a slashing defense. The Carolina lads virtually sewed up the State Championship when they won this game, for Davidson had tied Wake Forest earlier in the season. Hendrix, the heady little quarterback for Davidson, was the individual star of the game; but the steady and more consistent team work of Underwood, Bonner, McIver, Robinson, and Whisnant was more than enough to offset the brilliant playing of Hendrix. Jack Cobb and Underwood did some fine passing in this game, and this passing was largely responsible for the two touchdowns that the Carolinians made. The coaches did not allow the local lads to open up their full attack against the Presbyterians, and as a whole played a defensive game, resorting to open football while on the offensive in order to keep the Virginia scouts from learning all our plays. The game ended 13 to 0 in favor of the Tar Heels.

The annual Carolina-Virginia Thanksgiving day game was played in Chapel Hill before a crowd of about 20,000 loyal supporters of the two teams. Virginia took the ball in the first quarter before the Tar Heels hardly seemed to know what it was all about and worked it down to Carolina's goal, and from about the 15 yard line Carter Diffey booted across a field goal. After this first score no one seemed to be able to make any headway with the ball; each team seemed to be a little careful about opening up a driving offense. In the last quarter the Tar Heels awakened to the fact that unless something was done they were beaten, and they uncorked a dazzling attack which carried the ball well down into Virginia's territory. With the ball on Virginia's twenty-yard line and with three yards to go for a first down, Bunn Hackney dropped back behind the line and lifted a beautiful field through the uprights, tying up the score at 3 to 3. The game ended with the ball in Carolina's possession about in the center of the field. The entire Virginia team, led by Captain Carter Diffey and Mulligan Holland, who were the outstanding Virginia stars, worked more smoothly than did the Tar Heels. The Carolina lads all fought like demons, but did not show as much coördination and team work as did the Virginians. Captain McIver and "Stump" Robinson, playing their last game for the Tar Heels, were the most consistent forwards, while Bonner, Underwood, Hackney, and Ferrell were the big guns in the backfield.

Basketball—The Season

FOR the third consecutive year and for the fourth time out of the last five years the North Carolina team finished the season as champions of the Southern Inter-collegiate Basketball Tournament. This year our lads entered the tourney in Atlanta very badly handicapped. They were the champions of the tournament and every team that entered was out to see that the Tar Heels did not repeat; besides this, Billy Devin, All-Southern guard, had only recently recovered from a severe attack of influenza. There were two other reasons why every team was out to play North Carolina to the last, and these two reasons were Jack Cobb and Bill Dodderer. Cobb had been high scorer of the tournament and on every "All-Southern" team for the last two years, and Bill Dodderer had been a member of two championship Carolina teams and was "All-Southern" center in 1925. Despite these disadvantages the "Flying Phantoms" from North Carolina entered and won the tournament.

The Clemson-Carolina game, the first one of the tournament, was a whirlwind affair. The Tar Heels played as a mechanical unit, running up a 51 to 21 score. The entire Carolina team played brilliantly, but Cobb with 14, Newcomb with 12, and Hackney with 10 points, were the outstanding stars.

In the University of Virginia game the North Carolina boys found the traveling "not so smooth." Mulligan Holland and Frank Meade, Virginia aces, were adepts at making good, long shots, and the two between themselves kept the Carolinians on the run. The Tar Heels managed to pull away from Virg'nia in the last minutes of play, however, and the game ended 25 to 23 in favor of North Carolina. Artie Newcomb was high scorer of this game, ringing up 11 points during the fray.

In the semi-finals the Tar Heels downed the University of Mississippi lads with a 38 to 23 score. The game was a "nip-and-tuck" affair until the final minutes of the game, when the Tar Heels settled down to a short and effective passing game which enabled them to pull away from the boys from "Old Miss." Newcomb, with a total of eight points to his credit, was again high scorer of the contest. The defensive play of both teams was outstanding; Mississippi kept two men on Jack Cobb during most of the play.

The final game was much slower than would naturally be expected. The Mississippi Aggies were downed by the same score as their sister institution had been downed on the previous evening; it was 38 to 23. Although the Aggies took the lead in the early minutes of the contest the final outcome was never in doubt; the Carolina lads had their opponents completely outclassed. Jack Cobb, playing his last game for North Carolina, grew tired of the doglike guarding of his opponents and threw all caution aside. He ran roughshod over the A. and M. boys, looping eight field goals and three foul shots for a total of nineteen points during the final half. Newcomb was the other outstanding star; this tall center shot eleven points and was the center of the North Carolina attack. Ricks and Stone were stellar performers of the Mississippi team.

Due to their brilliant work, Cob and Newcomb were unanimous selections on the "All-Southern" team picked by the different sports-writers in attendance at the tourney. Captain Dodderer, Devin, and Hackney were mentioned on the "All-Southern" second team. Jack Cobb ended his collegiate basketball career in the Atlanta tournament; he was high scorer of the tournament for three consecutive years and he was placed on every "All-Southern" basketball team picked within the last three years. Thus passes one of the most consistent and brilliant basketball players that North Carolina, or the entire country, has ever known.

The Season

Under the coaching of P. H. Quinlan, former V. M. I. coach, the Carolina "Matmen" had an extremely successful season. In the meets within North Carolina, Duke, N. C. State and Concord "Y" were met and easily defeated. On the Northern trip the University of Virginia and V. P. I. were defeated, while the Tar Heels bowed to the grapplers of V. M. I.

The Carolina Grapplers were unable to secure a match with Davidson College but as comparative scores of the Davidson-N. C. State and the Carolina-N. C. State meets favor the Tar Heels, the latter do not hesitate to claim the State Championship.

The Season

Although the Carolina "mit-pushers" were unable to schedule more than two matches, they had a well organized team which made the two teams that they met "sit up and take notice." Practically every battler from this year's team will be back next year, and if nothing unforeseen happens between now and then Coach Rowe should be able to put out a wonderful array of boxers. Coach Rowe, a Charlotte boy and one of the South's best light-weight boxers, coached the team this year and was largely responsible for the excellent showing of the Carolina men in their numerous exhibition bouts and in the two Inter-collegiate meets. The following men should show up well next year: Jarrell, Bobbitt, Shaw, Tenney, Butler, Profit, Jenkins, Warren and Shuford. There will be some good material from the Freshman team also.

PHI BETA KAPPA BLUES

My dad made Phi Beta Kappa when he went to school.
So when I went off to college, he said, "Don't be a fool.
Study hard and study often,
And after a while your task will soften."
Was his parting tip.
Here I am,
And I'll be damn
I can't even get my dip.

REFRAIN:

So I've got the Phi Beta Kappa Blues,
I'm overrun with "rues."
I never studied as my daddy told me,
And now I'm going home and he's gonna scold me.
I'll have to say, "Father, I cannot tell a lie,
The only thing I made was Kappa Beta Phi.
And I made a bigger slip,
I di-di-didn't get my dip."
Oh, gee; oh, gee! why didn't I get that key?
I got the Phi Beta Kappa Blues.

Loose is one of the "stingy" tribe, both "ex" and "dis." He is a pedigreed impossibility bound. A bright little subbeam. The only thing he has never opposed while here is the abolition of the barber shops and plumbing fixtures. But that is not the reason he has soured on the world. He is the delight of the instructors' lives—because he gives them wonderful opportunities to show how smart they are. He won the math medal because when they let "x" represent the unknown quantity, Loose refused to agree that it was unknown. He loves oysters, turnips, and synthetic gin—because they don't agree with him. Loose is planning to be a lawyer because he thinks they do a lot of objecting. He has tried every boarding house in town and has gone crazy about one because it gives him lots of complaints. He went out for football, but quit because there was not enough opposition. Loose tried out for the gym team. At the top of a giant swing he disagreed with the law of gravity. Loose lost.

Life work: Engineering or something.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who to himself hath said,
As bosomward his chest extended,
"Occasionally, I'm pretty damn splendid."

"Doodles," as he is expectantly called, is one of the brainy men of our class. A glance at the rank and titles hung after his name will quickly convince you of that. That he was able to be acquitted of the charge of being a member of an engineering society shows the stuff that is packed away above his ears. He is a good boy. He joined the Y three times in his Freshman year and twice during his Sophomore year. His ambitions as old age settled upon him last year, and now he says he is good enough. "Doodles" has been a staunch Democrat every year and is proud of it. He has been of great help to the politicians during his college career and should be of more assistance next year when he attains his majority. "Doodles" is a shark on mathematics—a hammer-headed shark. You can't drive it in with a hammer. But let not your idle thoughts betray you into thinking that he has not shown proficiency as an engineer. He became such a clever slide rule operator—well, he made second trombone in the band. We know "Doodles" will make a great success in life just as we all know that he knows we'll all make a great success in life, and we wish him well just as we know he'll open a hot-dog stand and retire on the tourist trade to his dear books on calculus, transits, and the thermodynamics of diluted mustard.

Clarence is our soshul lion. Clarence, in all the time he faced them, missed just one, and only to answer to "What's wrong with this picture?" And he wrote the magazine about it, and has been getting letters from them ever since. "Apologizing," he says. Clarence is something like a cat. Drop him in the midst of a ladies' tea party and he'll land on both feet ev-er-ry time. He is always properly garbed. He gets real peevish because he says the fellow who writes "What the young man will wear" is getting personal. And can you blame him? Clarence will make a great success in life, and we all wish him well just as we know he wishes us—if he thinks about it.

Why all the working
I can't see anything to it.
Why not put it off?
Perhaps you won't have to do it.

Cholly is a courageous youth. He won't stand for anything. He has sat at the feet of the mighty for years—or any other place where he can find a purchase for his most valuable possession. He had a chance to stand at the head of his class, but Cholly declined. Cholly dreads to face the life outside. He says if tomorrow ever does come, he will have more than he can possibly do. His other fear is that some one will find a cure for sleeping sickness or lead poisoning. He has won a number of honors on the campus. During his four years on the campus he has worn only one pair of shoes and twenty-four pairs of trousers. His hero is Chief Sitting Bull. When they asked him in Commerce what the buffalo on the nickel stood for, he replied: "It didn't have room to sit down." Cholly is going into the slumber business. His favorite song is "A Wise Old Owl Sat in an Oak." His favorite flower is the pansy, because they grow in beds.

"Father's a professor at U. N. C.
Lord, how easy they go with me!"

Chipotle is one of those men you admire. His father's being a professor hasn't handicapped him in the least. Instead of running off to some other college he has remained right here and taken advantage of his opportunities. Versatility and ease, that's Chipotle. Just a glance at his list of activities will convince that you that he is endowed with those gifts. Everything comes to him just as easily as falling off a log. But the funny part about it is that he does not favor campus activities. "They don't mean anything and they take up a lot of your time," says Chipotle. But we believe that is only his modesty speaking. Chipotle is the instructors' pet. He says they are encouraging the local boys to go to college in their home town. We all believe he will be a great success—if he remains in college.

"He won't be happy till he gets it."

"Useless," as he is affectionately called by his classmates, is the Class Sheik. Rudy and Ben Turpin take lessons from him. When he does his stuff, they just throw away their lipsticks, cigarettes, and gin bottles and follow after him. Useless has not been a student—but gee whiz! Who can be a student and do what he has done? But Useless is fair-minded. One day he said to me; "Do you think I look like John Gilbert?" Grace thinks so, but I believe I am more like Barthelness." That's typical of Useless—always ready to admit a mistake. Useless never starts anything he doesn't finish; so we suppose we'll soon hear of him as the happy mate to one of the members of the unfair sex. We wish Useless every success in life just as we know he wishes every member of this dear old class success, which is the greatest class ever graduated from the dear old classic shades, as none can deny and we all agree to.

I've got the inconsistent blues
For the dear old daily news.

To Effervescent we owe our fighting Carolina spirit. It was he who beat Virginia last year by steadily cheering the boys from the first whistle to the last. When defeat looked certain, Effervescent rose in his seat and shouted, "Stick behind 'em, gang." And with that the tide turned and we were victorious. Effervescent left us in the third installment of his Junior year, but returned three years ago in time to be graduated with us this year. Effervescent has been a regular busybody on the campus, getting into everything and in everybody's way. It's just such men as he who keep our spirits up. We all wish him a great success just as we know he wishes us a great success. At Senior Smoker he said to us: "We'll soon part, gang, and I want you fellows to know that I'll always be behind you to the last ditch." We all cheered and left there feeling that there was a man who had left his mark on Carolina.

"Whoever is divine can have no earthly cares."

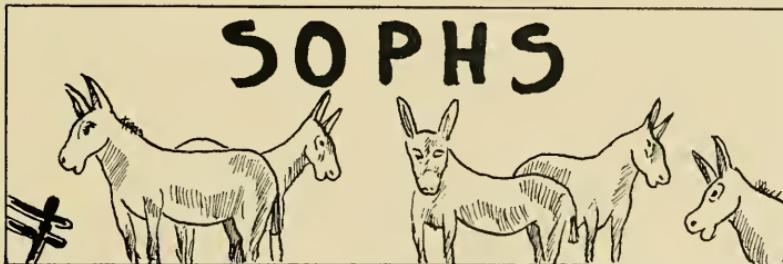

Having nominated the dear old University as a fortunate alma mater, Horace left Crackety High School in the lurch and a new Finchley suit. It is needless to mention what he did at C. H. S.; for we are talking about what he did here. How he scored a success remains to be seen, if you haven't met him. There isn't one thing Horace hasn't attempted and done, except study, and that was because he didn't want to contaminate his original ideas. And we can certainly agree with him. He is one of those men born to think and act. He has actually thought of things which could not be put down on paper, and he can lead both men and women into anything. Horace is tall and radical, and usually has his way about everything. He said his four years here were wasted and made the faculty agree with him; and he also made them agree that study would do him no good. Predicting a future for Horace is easy. He is the only member of the class who doesn't get our good wishes; for we just know he can take care of himself.

Scenes From the Playmakers

These well-preserved bits from well-deserved hits never failed to bring tears, laughter, or eggs from audiences wherever they were shown.

The First is a Mountain Drama, entitled

"THE LAST OF THE LOUSE"

The scene is a dirty hovel in the backwoods of the North Carolina Mountains. The daughter, who has just returned from her first year in high school, is raging at her mother. Her poor mother, who is seated on the floor in the corner of one of the two gloom-stricken rooms amongst rags, bones, and hanks of hair, garbed in rags herself and chewing tobacco and smoking a pipe, is chewing, spitting, crying, and cursing, as she reaches for a liquor bottle.

DAUGHTER: This is the dirtiest, filthiest, nastiest, and dirtiest place ever I've saw. The beds are black and full of lices; there are not no curtains on the winders; there's tobacco juice and liquor on the floor and YOUR FACE; you can't put a finger down without getting it dirty. I'm gonna sell this pig-pen right now! (Crying.)

MOTHER (FORMERLY MAW): Yew ain't gonna sell this place whar you was born and I been livin' at Now! What's good enough for yer Maw is good enough fer yew, damn ye, and I don't ker how dirty it is. Yew ain't gonna sell this here house, and I ain't gonna leave them yonder mountings!

DAUGHTER: I'm sorry I talked to you that way, Mama. I won't sell the old homestead, I'll give the damn thing away!

A few years ago we could understand why a student objected to co-education. We must all admit that at that time our few co-eds were anything but fair to look upon. But can you say that today? If you can say it, it doesn't mean anything; for we have proof of your error right here on this page. Is there a better looking group anywhere than this one pictured above? No! You who are better judges of pulchritude than we would emphatically answer that question affirmatively. And you could pick out the very qualities of beauty, because we know they are there from head to foot. Three rousing cheers for co-education!!!

THE STUDENT COUNCIL

The class of '26 should always be proud of the student council that guided them through the last year of their college life. There has never been a more well-rounded council. All are members of the Y. M. C. A., and there are 2 Baptists, 2 Presbyterians, 2 Methodists, and 2 Episcopalians in this group. It is with deepest regret that we see some of them leave, and we realize what a pity it is that we do not have more men of this type to uphold our sacred honor system at dear old U. N. C. Just a glance at their record will convince you that we have here a bunch of real men: Shipped for drinking, 123; gambling, 241; stealing, 43; cheating, 1; other offenses, 63. All hail John Dunnit, President of the Senior Class. John shadowed a bunch of wicked Seniors one night and caught twelve of them gambling. And he did it single handed. John made Golden Fleece.

W. J. Bryan was a Dark Night

Proof:

A Dark Night is without light and so is a Dumb Dora.

Therefore, a Dark Night is a Dumb Dora.

A Dumb Dora is unpopular and so is Halitosis.

Therefore, a Dumb Dora has Halitosis.

Halitosis is insidious, and so are Sophomores.

Therefore, Sophomores have Halitosis.

A Sophomore's head is square and empty, and so is a Box Car.

Therefore, a Sophomore's head is a Box Car.

A Box Car has wheels and so has a Ford.

Therefore, a Box Car is a Ford.

A Ford makes a lot of useless noises and so did W. J. Bryan.

Therefore, W. J. Bryan is a Ford.

And therefore, W. J. Bryan, was a Dark Night.

THE VICTORIOUS FOOTBALL TEAM

THE FOOTBALL SEASON OF 1925

Nine victories and no defeats was the record of the very successful football team that represented us last fall (1925)! Undoubtedly, it was the best season we have ever had, and it's something for us to look back on and be proud of. When it came to punting, passing, block and tackling, and general all around work, we really believe that we were unsurpassed.

In the last game of the season (with our ancient rivals, the Old Dominion gang), we won what was probably up until the last minute of the last quarter of the game a lost game. A graphic description follows:

In the last few minutes, McPunt, Captain and half-back of the Carolina team, when everything was going against us, started on his own thirty-five yard line and ran the width of the field before he was dragged down by the opposition (Virginia). We might add here that the score at that time was 14 to 0 against us. Then Patootie, our line plunger, plunged up and down the same line several times, keeping the Virginia boys right on their toes. Virginia was plainly rattled. At that moment the unexpected happened. McPunt took a pass from the air, much to the latter's consternation, and scrambled down the field with two of our mainstays, Patootie and Croup, right at his heels. Well, McPunt scored a touchdown and we were ahead. The score of the game was at that time 15 to 14 in our favor. McPunt tried for extra point, and when he missed the score remained the same. For the benefit of those who were not present at that game we will print the scoring: Touchdown—McPunt, 6 points; first place—McPunt, 5 points; second place—Patootie, 3 points; third place—Croup, 1 point.

BASEBALL

Carolina had a very successful baseball season in that only game was lost by the local nine. That was the Epsom Salts High School team, which was purely a preliminary game; and we wouldn't have lost that if it hadn't been that the pitcher, Old Slabsides, had a bad day the week before when the visitors beat us out of that game. As it was, how can anybody pitch with fielders cracking peanuts and throwing the shells around carelessly. It's no wonder that Slabsides weakened in the first inning after the strain of the entire game up to that point. Besides it was just dumb luck on the part of the Salts team, for whoever heard of those lucky hits going where they weren't any fielders. Our boys hit well also in that game. Sonando, first baseman, got a home run the first time up, but one of the other team's fielders accidentally caught it. What was he doing out of his position anyhow? You can't expect a well-coached team to defeat a bunch who haven't had enough training to put their outfielders where they belong. And that's what happened. We all look back with pride on the very successful season, marred by only one loss, and of course the others which even the umpire admitted were moral victories; and we wouldn't have lost that one if Pendergraft's bus hadn't broke down and delayed the umpire getting here, and that delayed the game, and by the time it has started, the other team had practiced for two hours, and that was more practice than they ever had, and that's why we have such a perfect record, and we wouldn't have lost that if luck hadn't been against us.

The Track Team

Carolina can boast of one of the best track teams in the South. And when we say team we mean team, because they always pulled together. In every event this season the team was running neck-and-neck. If one of the runners was in the rear then all the others were in the rear too, because there was none of that individual stuff that always upsets a team. However, several of our representatives were in the spotlight at times—particularly, Grimes and Soile. The superiority of the team and the wonderful team work were shown in the annual Cake Race. We personally observed forty or fifty members of the Carolina Team come in ahead of the entire field and modestly select the smallest cake. You can safely say that when it comes to cakes the Carolina team is right there. Then to what is the success of the Carolina Team due? There is but one answer and that is evident from a glimpse at the group above—Each member of the team has a neat brace of legs. The pair of legs on the right end are as pretty as any we've ever seen. Woolums, the owner, says that legs make the man, which is evident from the fact that he lost only one race during the year, and that was because he had to wear two mile running-pants in the hundred yard dash.

Humor Section

In keeping with the precedent set by the editors of the 1924 YACKETY YACK, we are likewise printing a collection of readily understandable jokes. What makes them understandable is that they were produced by our own University Faculty. If you have ever heard any of them on class, as you doubtless have, please be forbearing for the sake of those who have not had that pleasure.

In addition to our jokes, we are including an approved anthology of college verse, containing all the best bits of verse and perverse appearing in the Carolina Magazine during the past year.

The following joke we consider the best of the lot because it displays so clearly the naïveté of George Bernard Shaw and others.

DR. PENDERSUN was kind enough to tell us this one:

NURSE: Mr. George Bernard Shaw, don't you want to see your little daughter the stork brought?

MR. SHAW: No; in a case like that the delectableness of ontogeny recapitulates the asbestos.

DR. PENDERSUN: Heh, heh, heh, Pshaw!

ANSWER: Shaw was afraid it might be a little boy.

DR. COLLAR HUSK: Do you ever blow your horn at crossings?

DEAN BALLSEN: I never do it unless absolutely necessary. It's hard on your laundry bill.

ANSWER: Dean Ballsen thought he said nose instead of horn.

MR. CROMER (instantly): If all the chapel seats in Memorial Hall were stacked one on top of the other, the Freshmen would be glad.

DEAN BROADSHAW (suspiciously): Yes; quite true; but who is going to stack them?

ANSWER: He means they would have to sit on the floor.

PARSON CROSS: Have you heard the Horse's Song?

PARCHY FOWLER: I don't think so.

P. CROSS: Sonya.

P. FOWLER: I don't think so; I don't think so. How you tell dat?

P. CROSS: Simple; Horse's Sonya.

DR. COLLAR HUSK (at a watermelon party in China or Asia): Boys and girls, as we approach the close of this slimy and sloppy, yet facetious party, I shall be one among those to cap the evening in conventional style. That is to say, a certain lady, whose first name begins with a letter that is pronounced in the same way as a certain conjunction in the vernacular of the negro, is going to get her map smeared with the rind of a very large ovoid and roundish fruit of a cucurbitaceous plant; and so thoroughly that it will require months and months to rebuild the complexionary danb which the patent powder-puff pats of the past have plastered for her.

THE CERTAIN LADY: I ain't no lady, I'm yer wife.

ANSWER: Dr. Collar Husk will have to answer for this.

MR. CROMER (personally): If all the cows in the world were placed end to end, which end would it be?

DEAN BROADSHAW (eagerly): I haven't thought of that; would it be the front end?

MR. CROMER (disdainfully): No, dumbbell, it would be the end of milk.

ANSWER: We didn't get that one.

COTTON STORAGE

Within one hundred miles of Greensboro the annual consumption of cotton is a million bales, nearly as much as the State produces.

The kind of cotton that North Carolina produces is used in and around Greensboro but is not used largely in some other manufacturing districts.

Then why not store in a bonded warehouse in the best market, where money is easy to borrow if you need it; where facilities are best and rates cheap and in your interest.

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to interpret the ideas of the Staff and create in material form their vision.

From the art work and engravings to the finished book, this volume is the result of organized coöperation with the Staff.

Such able coöperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete coöperation from art work and engravings to the finished book, we offer an excelled service. Complete service means undivided responsibility as to the results—one organization to correspond and talk with—one trained director to merge the many ingredients into the finished product.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.

DELIVERING COAL BY WIRE

Even in this age of miracles, people would hardly credit the assertion if they were told that invisible coal and water are being delivered by wire. Yet that is exactly what this and every other public utility in the nation is doing every hour of the day and night.

It requires millions of tons of coal and millions of gallons of water to generate the electricity which provides light or drives the motors of industry. Invisible coal also is transported in pipes when gas is used. In hundreds of other ways the utilities invisibly serve their customers, cheaper and better than they could serve themselves.

YOUNG MAN, START RIGHT

Most men begin life without any property value. Their biggest asset is their life value. Their life value is dependent upon character and brain power.

LET US CAPITALIZE YOUR LIFE VALUE

Business science has thus far confined itself essentially to the organization, management and liquidation of property values. Your life value should be treated just as scientifically as property values. This can only be done by means of life insurance. Life insurance is practical thrift. Life insurance couples judicious savings and protection. It gives a man credit and courage in business. Start life with all the life insurance you can afford and keep on buying it as your ability to buy increases. Whatever helps to build North Carolina helps you, therefore, buy from the company that keeps your premiums at home.
